General and Banker James J. Phelan Endorse American's Move to Aid Poor

Endorsement of the Boston American's sixth annual Christmas Basket Fund to buy dinners for poor widows and children continue to come from leading citizens. Among those who have recently added their words of praise are General Clarence R. Edwards, beloved leader of the Yankee Division, whose deeds in France are familiar to all New Englanders, and James J. Phelan, one of the leading bankers of the city.

In a letter to the Christmas Basket editor General Edwards says: "I am glad to endorse the American's Christmas Basket Fund. The problems right at our doorsteps are the ones that should interest us more than anything else in these days of trying to reach an equilibrium."

Mr. Phelan, a leader in civic affairs, sent a check for $100. Every year since the fund started he has sent substantial contributions. These acts speak louder than any

BRITISH TROOPS SEIZE TURKISH AMMUNITION

London, Nov. 12.—British troops in Asia Minor have seized 300 railway cars filled with ammunition from the Turks at Kutaya, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople today.

Recent dispatches emphasize the chaotic conditions in Turkey. Fighting recently broke out between the Turkish troops and French soldiers near Ankara, and there have been reports of other clashes. A Turkish revolutionary government has been established by Mustapha Kiamil Pasha in Armenia, and it was rumored that he was seeking an alliance with the Russian Bolsheviks.

HOT WATER IN TUB FATAL TO WOMAN

As a result of the death of Mrs. Edward H. Lotz of Malden in a Wellesley sanitarium, District Attorney Fred J. Katzman of Norfolk County has ordered a thorough investigation.

Today Dr. Hodgedon, medical examiner of Norfolk County, conducted an autopsy at Wallace's undertaking rooms in Wellesley.

Some time Sunday Mrs. Lotz was placed in a bathtub and the hot water turned on. The attendant left her and on returning found her dead. The claim is set up by the sanitarium authorities that the death was not the fault of the attendant. On the contrary, they place the blame on defective plumbing.

Mrs. Lotz resided with her husband, Edward H. Lotz, at the Somerset, a fashionable apartment hotel in Malden.

District Attorney Katzman has not as yet received a report from Dr. Hodgedon. Until such time as he does he will not discuss the case. Mr. Lotz could not be located in Malden today.

ILLINOIS MINERS REFUSE TO WORK

PARDON IS ASKED FOR HARRIS

Convicted Head of Auto Thieves' Gang Said to Be Dying in Jail

Samuel C. Harris, Boston business man, whose conviction as the "brains" of the gang of auto thieves operating in several States was one of the criminal sensations of recent years, was today said to be dying in the Cambridge House of Correction.

Because of his physical condition, friends of Harris today petitioned the Governor's Council to grant him a pardon under parole conditions.

Melvin M. Johnson, counsel for Harris, presented to the Pardon Committee of the Council the opinion of five physicians of repute that Harris was suffering from an incurable disease and that he had but a few months, at most, to live.

They said that his life might be slightly prolonged if he were allowed to go home. The physicians, who were unanimous in their opinion, included two appointed by the Commonwealth, two selected by Harris, and the jail physician, Dr. Edward R. Utley.

The pardon was recommended by two members of the Parole Board, Chairman Frank A. Brooks, who dissented, said that he had no desire to have Harris die in prison, and that he would not oppose a pardon if it were granted upon the condition that Harris would never undertake to engage in business again.

Chairman Brooks said that there were twenty-seven indictments still pending against Harris on account of his alleged connection with the auto thieves, that Harris had expressed no regret for his crimes and had made no offer of restitution.

Harris is serving sentence of two and one-half years in the Cambridge House of Correction. He was sentenced April 17.

$2,000,000 Worth of Diamonds Imported From Holland

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The high cost of living has not restricted demand for diamonds. According to records of the United States collector of customs for October more than $2,000,000 worth of diamonds were imported from Holland by Chicago jewelers by registered mail alone.

"This broke all previous records," said John P. Hurley, collector, when he finished the tabulation. "Before the war it [illegible] proportions."

DISMISS ARMY STORE MEN FOR ABSENCE

Eight men have been discharged from the mail order department of the Army Store, South Boston, for attending a football game last Saturday without leave of absence.

"Rolling stores" are being operated this week by means of trucks laden with supplies, as follows: Today, Wakefield, Cambridge and Watertown; tomorrow, at 10 a. m., a truck will be at Soldiers' Monument, Arlington; Friday, Melrose; Saturday, Brookline, Cambridge and Rockland. Arrangements are being made to send "rolling stores" soon to Medford, Somerville and Malden. The trucks are laden with bacon, evaporated apples, and the following canned goods: baked beans, corned beef, corned beef hash and roast beef.

The army stores in Brockton and Worcester were closed on Armistice Day, the former because the hall was used for a holiday ball which necessitated removal of the supplies. They were replaced today and the stores will reopen tomorrow.

It was announced today that the price of lead harnesses, listed at $20, has been changed to $23. Wheel harnesses remain at their previous price of $16.

Total refunds on unfilled orders to date amount to $139,131.68, officials said today. The total amount received to date in mail orders is $494,554.92. A balance of about $90,000 remains to be refunded. Colonel H. B. Barry, in charge of this department, issued a statement urging the public to be patient for a few days longer, saying that all refunds would soon be completed. He repeated his previous warning against ordering from old price lists, and requested that money orders be made payable to the superintendent of the several states, instead of to individual officers.

U.S. WAR ON PARLOR REDS

Raids Expected to Reach Families of High Social Standing; General Cleanup Ordered

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The government's offensive against revolutionaries was given new impetus today by the outburst in Centralia, Wash., on Armistice Day.

Department of Justice agents were given instructions to use their efforts to run down those concerned in the attack against former service men, and it was believed that it might lead to another general round-up of supposed agents of organized government.

Attorney-General Palmer has given district attorneys strict orders for speedy action in securing the deportation of those aliens already taken in these government dragnet, and orders have also been given Federal agents to continue their arrests with the greatest vigilance.

Agents of the Department of Justice, it was learned today, are securing evidence not only against those who are open leaders of movements designed for the overthrow of the government, but also against

KAISER FORCED U-BOAT WARFARE SAYS CAPELLE

Berlin, Nov. 12.—Admiral von Capelle, formerly of the German admiralty staff, testifying before the war guilt commissions of the National assembly, declared that the German navy chiefs were convinced that England could not be forced with submarines, but that Kaiser compelled them to start the ruthless U-boat warfare. Defending himself against the declaration that he had not ordered sufficient submarines, Admiral von Capelle said he had ordered the construction of 110 submarines, but that General Ludendorff refused to expedite their construction.

North Dakota Seizes Mines

Thousands of soft coal miners, many of them in open defiance of the orders of their leaders, refused today to obey the order to return to work.

While in some cases the disobedience of the miners is doubtless due to failure of the recall order to reach their districts in time, in many instances the strikers have refused point blank to obey their leaders. The return of the miners later in the week is problematical.

As a result of the situation in North Dakota, Governor L. J. Frazier has declared the State under martial law, and announced that the State will take over the operation of the lignite mines at once. Governor Frazier has ordered Adjutant-General Fraser to assume charge of the troops.

President Frank Farrington of the Illinois United Mine Workers' Union stated today that no coal miners in his State would return to work. The order for the men to return to work was issued yesterday from Indianapolis, he stated. He said he did not believe that the Illinois men would return to work until all their demands were gained.

In the Hocking district, near Athens, Ohio, 10,000 men were reported idle and determined not to report for work until after the Washington conference.

Reports from Steubenville, Ohio, stated that 5,000 Jefferson County miners remain out, and that mines at Dillonvale, Amsterdam, Bergholz, Rush Run, Adena and Wolfron are idle. Other sections of Ohio report that it will be several days before the men return.

Eight thousand miners were reported still out in Wyoming, the official recall order not having been received.

The Indiana miners generally are still out, there being sharp division of sentiment over the recall order among the 3,000 men in the Bicknell district. All the 8,000 men of the Terra Haute section remain out.

Michigan miners remain out, a dispatch from Saginaw states, pending the receipt of the recall order and the arrival of President Stevenson

JUDGE ENJOINS 'DRY LAW' IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Nov. 12.—This city stepped back into the "Wet" ranks today when Federal Judge Arthur L. Brown granted an injunction restraining United States Attorney Baker and Collector George F. O'Shaunessy from enforcing the provisions of the war time prohibition act. As a result of the injunction the breweries once more started to dispose of 4 per cent. beer and ale and the saloons opened up to sell it.

Judge Brown granted the injunction on the application of Michael J. Lynch, representing the Narragansett Brewing Company. He sought to have Attorney Baker and Collector O'Shaunessy restrained from enforcing the Volstead Act at this time.

In finding today Judge Brown stated this while the constitutionality of the Prohibition Amendment was not under consideration at the present time the amendment must be now accepted as a fact. And on its acceptance he ruled that the Volstead Act and its rigid enforcement at this time was a violation of the constitutional rights of the citizens of the country.

The injunction will prevail until such time as United States Attorney Baker files an answer to Attorney Lynch's bill of particulars. Mr. Baker may await the result of a hearing on appeal before the appellate division of the Supreme Court in Washington on November 20. There is a similar case to be argued before the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston later this month.

At present Providence is once more an oasis and should regain its one-time popularity.

OLD STRIP TICKETS KILLED

New Form for 15-Mile Zone Will Be in Full Effect by December 1

Thousands of Boston people will have to pay more money to go to and from their work daily, because of the orders of Director-General Hines, which eliminate the five and twenty-five-ride tickets within the fifteen-mile zone.

By the new schedule those who have been riding to Dorchester, Mattapan and Jamaica Plain for slightly more than five cents will now pay six cents or more the ride.

The new rates will be as follows:

Between Boston and Roxbury, Dudley Street, Bird Street, Crescent Avenue and Savin Hill, 6c cents.

Heath Street, Mount Bowdoin, Harrison Square, 77 cents.

Jamaica Plain, Dorchester, Pope's Hill, Shawmut Avenue, 93 cents.

Neponset and Ashmont, 99 cents.

While the plan goes into effect at once, holders of the tickets heretofore in use are allowed the right to ride on them until December 1. After that date these tickets may be redeemed at face value.

Whereas the five-ride tickets formerly sold for 25 cents, they will now sell twelve-ride tickets for either 66 or 99 cents, according to the length of the ride.

A twenty-five-trip ticket in use both on the N. Y., N. H. & H. and the B. & A. is also to be done away with. This ticket provided cut rates for commuters on the former road who live within a fifteen-mile radius of the city and also for B. & A. com-

Washington, Nov. 12.—Charge of "a palpable filibuster to prevent final action on the treaty" was made in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republican, who openly accused Senators Lafollette of Wisconsin, France of Maryland, Republicans, and Reed, Democrat, Missouri, of having "deliberately planned to engage in a filibuster to hold up a final vote on ratification." Senator Underwood secured sufficient signatures to a petition for enforecement of the cloture rule and Senator Hitchcock was empowered to use the petition if necessary.

I. W. W. Leader Lynched as Result of Slaying of Four War Veterans by "Reds"

Centralia, Wash., Nov. 12.—There are four dead bodies of four loyal citizens here today, murdered as the men were marching in the Armistice Day parade by shots alleged to have been fired by "Red" members of the I. W. W. from the seclusion of a building which has been housing that organization of late.

One other body, that of "Brick" Smith, secretary of the Centralia local of the I. W. W., who it is believed was lynched by infuriated ex-service men, lies at the morgue so far unclaimed by anyone.

SAY PRISONER CONFESSES.

Evidence that the fatal termination of yesterday's parade was planned weeks in advance was secured today by Prosecuting Attorney Herman Allen and the citizens' committee co-operating with the officials, through the alleged confession of James Lamb. Lamb was taken from the City Jail here to the County Jail at Chehalis for safety. According to Allen, Lamb confessed to him that plans were made to "get" four men prominent in anti-radical activities. Those were Grimm, MacIlfresh, Captain Livingston and William Scales. Livingston and Scales, Lamb states, escaped because they were not in the parade.

Prosecution of those found to be responsible Allen declared will be merciless. From here the radicals have radiated into the lumber camps and sawmills of the coast region, spreading their propaganda among workers in all directions. The exhibition of their lawlessness here yesterday will put them out of business in this district, the attorney asserted.

The mob, leading to the city and out of it have been guarded and patrolled since darkness set in last evening by members of Grant Post, American Legion, in an effort to intercept escaping members of the I. W. W. or those attempting to enter the city. No one is permitted to step from passenger trains and escape close scrutiny, suspicious appearing men being detained for investigation.

Unarmed and inoffensively marching in an Armistice Day parade yesterday afternoon four ex-service men were shot to death. Without warning of any kind rifles were discharged into the ranks of the marchers with the result that four lives were snuffed out.

VICTIMS OF ASSASSINS.

The dead:

Warren Grimm, University of Washington football player, Lieutenant in the Siberian expeditionary force and commander of Grant Post, American Legion, of this city.

Dale Hubbard, twenty-nine, son of R. P. Hubbard, and a veteran of eighteen months in France, who had previously served with the 161st Infantry in the Washington National Guard. He leaves a bride of three weeks.

Ben Casagranda, twenty-seven, an overseas veteran, who served in France and had recently returned. He leaves a widow and father in Centralia.

Arthur MacIlfresh, manager of the Frismore & Sears Pharmacy.

FIVE OTHERS WOUNDED.

Four other ex-soldiers, wounded, are reported out of danger. A fifth wounded veteran of the war, W. J. Earl, it is feared, may die.

Troops of the Washington National Guard are on duty in Centralia today. Arrival of the troops, it is said, has prevented further outbreaks and brought about the re-establishment of order. The first detachment of troops, members of Company F of the Third Washington Infantry, arrived here last night and were followed by other detachments of the State Guard. Lieutenant-Colonel E. C. Windsor of Tacoma, is in command. The troops were rushed here from Tacoma on orders from Governor Louis F. Hart, after an appeal by the Mayor of Centralia.

The attack upon the marchers came as the parade was passing the Avalon Hotel, located in a building near headquarters of the Centralia local of the I. W. W.

FOUR IN FIRING SQUAD.

According to several witnesses, the shots were fired from the entrance to the hotel and from a room on the second floor of the building. Four men are believed to have been in the firing party. The crowd, stunned into temporary inactivity, hesitated, then charged into the hotel building, but the gunmen, taking advantage of the moment's hesitation, had fled from the building. The crowd then started a pounding of all I. W. W. in town. They stormed the I. W. W. headquarters, completely demolishing the front of the building.

Several alleged I. W. W. were captured. Soldiers interfered when the crowd shouted their intention of lynching the suspects. After considerable difficulty, the soldiers managed to get the suspects from the crowd and marched them to the jail. A soldier guard was thrown about the jail. In the meantime squads of soldiers were rushed to all roads leading from the city in an effort to cut off the escape of all I. W. W.

A little later a posse of heavy armed men surrounded the jail and demanded the surrender of the prisoners. They were marched out and lined up. The posse's leaders then selected "Brick" Smith and ordered the others returned to jail.

The prisoner was placed in an automobile, which drove rapidly to the hills. When a bridge was reached a noose was adjusted about the man's neck, and he was swung rail.

TO CLEAN OUT "REDS."

Two hundred former soldiers had taken up positions in hills surrounding the town to prevent anyone escaping. They had secured arms and scores of civilians were aiding them in what was believed to be a general "clean up" of radicals.

Former army officers passed among the ex-soldiers urging them to uphold the law, but their words had little effect.

"We are going to clean out every red in town," was the reply of one trooper. A score of deputy sheriffs have been sworn in, but little hope was held that they would be able to quiet the growing anger of the crowds.

It was believed the attack on the parade was a continuation of trouble which broke out two months ago between "wobblies" and returned soldiers. At that time one radical was forced to leave town, but he later returned unharmed.

Expect Big Revelations in Government's War on "Reds" Operating in Boston

Agents of the Department of Justice and Army Intelligence Department conferred today with Assistant District-Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher, in charge of the "Red" investigation in Boston. The conference was held to strengthen the belief that sensational developments in connection with radical activities will be forthcoming within a few days.

The possibility that a special session of the Suffolk County Grand Jury will be called to return indictments against radical leaders in Boston grows with the investigation.

Attorney Gallagher and an agent of the Army Intelligence Service went over literature seized by the Department of Justice officials. Much of the radical literature in possession of the Department of Justice will be important in the round-up and prosecution of the "Reds."

The work of bringing the investigation to a head—which in the opinion of officials will take not more than three days—is being rushed by every investigating agency.

Coincident with the investigation came the announcement that the Boston police are searching for an alleged leader of the anarchistic movement who is believed to have fled the city after the arrests a few days ago of three members of the "Communist Party."

Legion Veterans Wreck 'Commune' Headquarters and Radical Paper Office

Oakland, Cal., Nov. 12.—Headquarters of the Communist labor party and the office of "The World," a radical publication, are dismantled today as the result of a raid on those places last night by fifty American Legion members and other ex-service men.

The raids were made, the soldiers said, because they had confirmed reports that members of the Communist labor party had shrouded the American colors with red flags, and had applauded speeches advocating the transformation of the American government to a Soviet.

They are men who are alleged to have asserted at the I. W. W. Hall last night that it was the American Legion that was responsible for the riot at Centralia, Washington. Among the number are Joseph Laundy, Joseph Clark and Floyd Hyde, prominent radical leaders.

Large quantities of I. W. W. literature were seized in a raid today.

from the Indianapolis conference.

A few districts in Pennsylvania reported the men returning to work, but in other sections the men announced they would not return until after the Washington conference. The 20,000 men of the Washington County district are expected to return by Friday.

Miners Inclined to Await Outcome of Big Washington Meeting

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 12.—With early settlement of the wage schedule controversy between the miners and operators in prospect as a result of acceptance by union officials of Secretary of Labor Wilson's invitation to attend a conference in Washington Friday, interest here today turned to the probable effect recall of the strike order will have upon the idle mine workers.

Reports from some localities indicate while in other fields it is apparent the miners will await further developments before going back to the mines. The belief is general among union officials and operators in Indiana that any general resumption of work cannot be expected before the end of the week.

Following the announcement of the mine workers' officials that they had voted to obey the court mandate, commanding them to recall the strike and the approval of the fact of the rescinding order by Judge A. B. Anderson in United States District Court, developments in the mine strike moved rapidly.

Union officials held a "policy meeting" in the afternoon, and it was in this session that they received Secretary Wilson's invitation to attend the Washington Wage Conference. On the heels of Secretary Wilson's message came a message from A. Brewster of St. Louis, chairman of the Central Competitive Field Operators, asking the union leaders if they would attend the conference; they replied that they had accepted Wilson's invitation. Matters of policy in the wage controversy were then dropped to await developments in the Washington gathering.

Coal Miners, Aroused, to Insist That Operators Comply with Demands

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Arrangements for the government's attempt at amicable adjustment of the differences between the coal miners and the operators were made today by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

Acceptance of the invitation to attend a conference here on Friday has been made by the leaders of the United Mine Workers of America and it is expected the operators will make formal acceptance, inasmuch as they have informally indicated they are ready for further negotiations.

Speedy adjustment of differences was not expected by officials here. They anticipate the negotiations will be long drawn out, although all are confident of ultimate success.

The mine workers' leaders are in no pleasant frame of mind after calling off the strike, and they are as insistent upon their demands as they have ever been. On the other hand, the operators insist that the war-time contract is still in force.

Secretary of Labor Wilson plans to urge the parties to the controversy to appoint their board for negotiation when they meet on Friday.

Leaders of the miners would prefer to settle the matter by negotiation, but some of them believe that the men in the coal fields would feel more certain of ultimate success if the matter were left to a tribunal selected by President Wilson, and because of this it may become necessary for the conference to call upon the President to name such a tribunal.

Officials here were watching with interest developments in the coal fields today to determine whether the men are going to obey the word of the leaders and return to work.

LEGION CONDEMNS ARMISTICE DAY ASSASSINATIONS BY I. W. W.

DEBATE ON LAW AND ORDER

Anti-Japanese Resolution Also Discussed; Chaplain O'Connor Out of Race

Minneapolis, Nov. 12—Ringing resolutions denouncing the I. W. W. outrages in Centralia, Wash., yesterday, were adopted unanimously and with great enthusiasm by the American Legion National Convention today.

After calling the delegates to order, Chairman Lindsay recognized Attorney-General Thompson of Washington. He read a telegram from the commander of the Centralia Post, narrating the facts relative to the firing upon the members of the Centralia Legion Post, and the steps taken by the authorities to deal with the Reds and Anarchists who murdered the Washington comrades as they were honoring Armistice Day.

When he read the statement that one I. W. W. had been hanged and sixteen jailed there was a tremendous outburst of applause.

The resolution expressed sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the dead, condemned the spirit which prompted the murders and demanded national legislation that will permit of the meting out of swift and stern justice.

DEBATE LEGION'S PART.

There was a great confusion of oratory for an hour after the denunciation of the Centralia outrage, on another resolution offered by the Washington delegation. It was read by Sergeant Jack Sullivan, and called upon the American Legion to stand ready at all times to put its forces behind all lawful efforts to put down disorder and lawlessness everywhere on every occasion. It closed with the slogan for the legion of "one for all and all for one and all for America."

Delegates from Washington strongly urged its adoption.

Delegate Perkins of New Hampshire thought the resolutions were good in intent, but might be construed in dangerous ways.

Colonel Donovan said this is the time for sanity and cool-headedness, and the country will look to the legion in convention for calm judgment. On his motion the resolution was referred to the committee on resolutions.

STRONG AGAINST JAPANESE.

The strongest kind of an anti-Japanese resolution was adopted. It called for the extension of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution so that the children of Oriental aliens born in this country shall not be considered citizens; to exclude picture brides; to exclude aliens who are not adaptable for citizenship; for American ideals, and American standards of living; and that the sub-committees on immigration of both Congress proceed without delay to the Pacific slope, to Hawaii, and the Philippines, to investigate conditions.

Walter Carey Tuller of Los Angeles roused the convention to a warm appreciation of the necessity for protection against the steady and insidious campaign of peaceful penetration which Japan has been waging in Pacific coast States and the territorial possessions. His description of the persistent and stealthy work of the Japanese gave the delegates a clear idea of the dangers which would face this country in the event of an attempted armed invasion.

ROUNDS OF APPLAUSE.

Mr. Tuller's picture was weird and terrible. Time and again his speech was interrupted by applause, and at his conclusion the convention stood and shouted its warmest approval of the resolutions to make the Japs behave and understand that American manhood means business in dealing with them.

For several minutes the legion convention told the world, through burst after burst of applause and cheering, that the boys who fought to make the world safe for democracy recognized the Japanese peril and could suggest the means for dealing with it.

There was a great uproar in the convention when the resolution censoring the War Department for granting honorable discharges to conscientious objectors was put to vote. The resolution further called upon Congress to investigate the War Department for doing so, to demand the recalling of these discharges and to deport every alien conscientious objector.

The vote in favor was a tremendous roar. One New York delegate voted in the negative. There was a storm of hissing. There were shouts of "put him out." "He's an anarchist." The tumult and threatening for a few minutes and only subsided when Colonel Donovan was heard shouting that New York was ashamed of the delegate and wanted the privilege of going on record as moving the adoption of the resolution.

HELD TO HIS VOTE.

Delegate W. H. Root of Haverhill, Mass., called for a roll-call. Another delegate asked for a standing vote.

Chairman Lindsay said he understood the man voting in the negative would not be heard from on another vote and put the question again. There was a roar of affirmation, but the lone objector stood his ground, and voted in the negative again.

This man was A. L. Boyce of New York city, the leader of the Boyce Tigers, an organization formed for preparedness before the war. He explained privately that he believed something along the lines suggested should be done, but he did not believed it was necessary to censure the War Department for every little mistake it had made unless it received commendation for the good things it had done.

Rev. M. J. O'Connor of Cambridge, Mass., State chaplain, announced today that he had withdrawn from the field of candidates for national chaplain.

His action was prompted by a desire not to embarrass the candidacy of Colonel Logan for national commander. The Massachusetts leaders informed the legion of his resignation that their delegation would be pleased to cast its sixty-five votes for Rev. Francis Kelley of New York city.

BAKER DECLINES TO DISCUSS LEGION

In Boston today to testify in the Cape Cod Canal case at the Federal Building, Secretary of War Newton D. Baker said that he could not discuss the attitude of the American Legion on a housecleaning for the War Department, because he "hadn't followed" the activities of the Legion.

It was explained to the secretary that the Massachusetts branch of the Legion had adopted resolutions for a thorough military housecleaning, and had approved "civilian influence" in the War Department.

"Know nothing about it," said Secretary Baker, puffing at his long black cigar.

Then with a smile he added: "The War Department is run by a civilian now."

Asked if his department had any plans in connection with the crusade against the "Reds," he said: "The War Department has nothing to do with it. That's up to the Department of Justice."

"You are holding your troops at the disposal of the Department of Justice?"

"Obviously."

The Secretary held out no hope for the strike. When questioned about demobilization, he said: "Don't know anything definite about it. I can't even define complete demobilization. That's up to the Attorney-General."

The characteristically brief interview closed with a statement that he would reserve what he had to say about the Cape Cod Canal for the witness stand.

LYNN AUTOIST KILLED; ANOTHER HURT IN UPSET

Hamilton, Nov. 12.—Maurice Cheney of No. 50 Andrews street, Lynn, was killed and Thomas Mahoney of No. 351 Central street, Saugus, was seriously injured when their auto turned over following a tire puncture on what is known as Gardner's straight of the State highway between Hamilton and Ipswich.

Cheney died soon after his arrival at the hospital. Mahoney received a fractured shoulder and internal injuries, it is believed. His name is on the danger list.

Say Rent Is Boosted On Tenants Who Have Coal In

Believing that their landlord is taking an unfair advantage of the fact that they have purchased their Winter coal, and that apartments are scarce, residents of twelve three-family houses on Crowell street, at the end of the Norfolk street car line in Dorchester, are getting up a petition complaining to the State authorities about increases in rent.

These residents complain that the twelve houses, built by the man who now owns them, rented at the rate of $72 a month for five rooms and $23 a month for six rooms, when the houses were new, five years ago. During the war, they claim, the rents were increased to $25 and $30, and now they have been increased to $35 and $60.

GIRL IN LEMKE DEATH CASE GIVES CLEW

Sweetheart of Slain Youth Found in New Haven Identifies Wrapper

New York, Nov. 12—Ellen Bellows, former sweetheart of Willie W. Lemke, the Flushing youth found strangled to death on his motorboat at College Point, L. I., October 15, has been found.

If a statement made by her is substantiated, it may prove conclusively that Lemke was murdered and that his murderer deliberately dressed the body in female attire to disgrace the young man.

Miss Bellows was shown an exclusive photograph of the women's clothing in which Lemke's body was attired. Upon examining the photograph, made at police headquarters several days ago, she said that the gingham wrapper belonged to the wife of a man responsible for her quarrel with young Lemke more than a year ago.

SUSPECT PROMINENT.

If the wrapper shall prove to be the property of this man's wife, it may indicate that the killing of young Lemke and the dressing of his body in women's clothes were the result of a perverted mind that sought to wreak vengeance on the son and disgrace his parents.

Miss Bellows, of course, knew nothing of the murder. It is alleged she was mistreated by this man about a year ago. He was prominent in Flushing and still lives there. Miss Bellows was then a high school pupil and the sweetheart of young Lemke. After the incident of her alleged mistreatment, Lemkee became estranged.

Although every precaution had been taken by Miss Bellows' guardian to prevent her being questioned, the following interview was had with her in New Haven:

"You are Miss Bellows and the former sweetheart of Jim Lemke?" A.—"Yes."

"Do you think he committed suicide, or do you think he was murdered?" A.—"I think he was killed."

"Why do you think so?" A.—"Because he was too manly and fine and bright-hearted to ever take his own life."

"You and he quarreled after he found out that you had been mistreated by a man?" A.—"Why, didn't you?" A.—"We didn't quarrel; we separated."

Her Miss Bellows was shown the photograph of the woman's clothing. She looked at it for a long time and then at a picture of young Lemke, and, turning white, she said:

"That wrapper belonged to that man's wife. I am pretty sure."

BOOST FARES TO RIDERS IN FIFTEEN-MILE ZONE

muters residing on the main line of that road as far as Wellesley and at eight stations on the branch line.

The five-trip ticket, because of its low rate, has resulted in congestion on trains during the rush hours, and it was hoped that the Public Service Commission, in assigning new rates, would relieve this by inducing residents of the suburbs to patronize the trolleys.

The steam roads petitioned for a rate which would equalize their fares with those of the Boston Elevated. This was denied by the Public Service Commission, however, and the small increase now to go into effect was the only concession made.

It is announced by Director-General Hines that no further increase is contemplated, in view of the prospects for termination of Federal control of the roads with the end of the year.

The Boston & Maine Railroad will publish the 25-trip tickets tomorrow to the following stations in the 15-mile zone:

Beaver Brook, Bedford, Bell Rock, Belmont, (Southern or Fitchburg Division), Bemis, Beachery (Fitchburg Division), Chelsea, Cherry Brook, Clematis Brook, Cliftondale, East Lynn, East Saugus, East Watertown, Edgeworth, Everett or West Street, Farm Hill, Forest Hills, Franklin Park, Fresh Pond, Glenwood, Greenwood, Hill Crossing (Southern or Fitchburg), Kendall Green, Linden, Lindenwood, Lynn, Lynn Common, Lynnfield, Maplewood, Medford, Medford Hillside, Melrose, Mount Auburn, Newton Street, North Cambridge, North Lexington, North Somerville, North Woburn, Pleasant Street, Prospect Hill, Reading Revere, Riverview, Roberts, Saugus, Somerville, Highlands, Somerville Junction, Stoneham, Stony Brook, Tufts College, Union Market, Union Square, Waltham (North) or Waltham, Waltham Highlands, Walnut Hill, Watertown, Waverley, Southern or Fitchburg, Wedgemere, Wellington, West Cambridge, West Medford, Weston, West Somerville, West Street or Everett, West Watertown and Winchester.

BOLSHEVISTS EXECUTE ANTI-REDS ENMASSE

Washington, Nov. 12.—Bolshevik leaders are executing anti-Bolshevik sympathizers, en masse, according to reports from Stockholm to the State Department. The reports declare the situation in Petrograd to be very serious. Advices to the State Department declared that the Bolshevik leaders, in order to attract deserters from General Yudenitch's forces, have issued a decree that lives of White soldiers will be spared.

MINOR SUES FOR $1,500 IN TEAM ACCIDENT

Rollo S. Lamson of Hudson has been sued for $1,500 by Thomas Stanton of Hudson, a minor, who sues through his father, Patrick Stanton. He alleges that on March 18, 1918, while on Apsley street, Hudson, he was struck and injured by a horse and wagon owned by the defendant.

PAULINE FREDERICK SUES PLAYWRIGHT HUSBAND

New York, Nov. 12.—Pauline Frederick, of stage and screen fame, has filed suit in the courts for an absolute divorce from her actor-playwright husband, Willard Mack.

Rumors of trouble between the couple were heard and were the gossip of playland some two years ago shortly after Mr. Mack took Pauline for his third wife. It was also the latter's second venture in marriage. The rumor seemed sustained shortly after the marriage when Willard left the bungalow in which they were living in California and came to New York.

Pauline took as her first husband Frankton Andrews, a wealthy architect, an associate of Charles P. Taft, a brother of the former President, who disgined the Hotel McAlpin. Mr. Andrews had been married once before.

Pauline has said that she is to return to the legitimate stage next month and will appear in a play written by Mr. Mack, a melodrama entitled "Lady Tony." Oddly enough, Marjorie Rambeau, the second wife of Mr. Mack, is now appearing in a play written by her former husband, "The Unknown Woman."

Miss Rambeau Trots Out New Husband, Hugh Dillman

New York, Nov. 12.—"What! I remarry Willard Mack? Why, that is simply ridiculous," exclaimed Marjorie Rambeau in her dressing room in the Maxine Elliott Theatre when told of the report that she and her former husband were to marry again as soon as Pauline Frederick divorces him.

"Don't folks know that I'm married already and very much in love with my husband?" continued Miss Rambeau.

And then she called Hugh Dillman from an adjoining dressing room and introduced him as her new husband. He, too, was surprised at the report and said:

"Hell Mack and I are good friends. But as for him marrying my wife—nothing doing."

If Miss Frederick is successful in her suit, Mack will have three exwives. His first, Mamie Crane, is now appearing in one of his plays, and Miss Rambeau, who was his second, is appearing in another play which he was called upon to "doctor" at the last minute.

CLAIMS SHONTS' FLAT LOOTED SINCE DEATH

New York, Nov. 12.—The apartment of the late Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, was looted, since his death, of personal property worth more than $50,000, according to an assertion made in Surrogate Fowler's Court by Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, the widow, through her attorney, George W. Files.

Mrs. Shonts' announcement was made in response to an application to the court for her removal as temporary administratrix, made by Delancey Nicoll, one of the executors under the will which named "my friend," Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas, as principal beneficiary of the $474,000 estate.

The purpose of Mrs. Shonts in securing her appointment as temporary administratrix, her attorney declared, was to recover the property alleged to have been looted from her dead husband's apartment. The widow was accused by Mr. Nicoll of misrepresenting facts when she applied for her appointment. He declared she knew there was a will and knew the contents thereof.

Provisions of the separation agreement of Mr. and Mrs. Shonts, made in June, 1916, were revealed. Mr. Shonts was to be allowed to live "as if unmarried" without interference from his wife, and her actions also were to refrain from criticism. She engaged herself not to "harass, molest or annoy" her husband, who was to pay her debts up to $50,000 and allow her $30,000 a year while they both lived.

BAKER TELLS OF OFFERS TO BUY CAPE CANAL

Company Refused $8,250,000; Waterway Is Too Limited, Says General Burr

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, summoned by the government, was the chief witness of the day in the government's suit to set a price on the Cape Cod Canal, now in its third week before Judge Morton and a jury at the Federal Building.

Secretary Baker testified that the Boston, New York and Cape Cod Canal Company was offered $8,250,000 for the canal by the government, but refused the offer. The matter of taking the canal over by the right of eminent domain then was taken up with the Attorney-General, and Secretary Baker, Secretary Daniels and Secretary Redfield formed a committee to meet with the heads of the canal company.

Several meetings of the committee and the canal men took place, Secretary Baker said, and a price agreed upon by the committee was refused by the company. Negotiations then were dropped, the committee not feeling able to increase its offer.

Secretary Baker was not cross-examined by Attorney Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for the company.

General Edward Burr, U. S. A. Head of the engineers stationed at New York, said he visited the canal Sunday and learned it had been closed several days because of the northeast storm. He said its commercial and military uses were very limited, because of its narrowness and the strong currents in Buzzard's Bay. He testified that because of its lack of width and depth the largest naval ships could not use it, and said it was open to enemy attacks. It could be fortified only at a great expense, he said.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Whipple General Burr said the canal would be needed if the enemy controlled Boston and New England harbors, but admitted that it would otherwise form a valuable means of intercommunication for naval craft.

SOVIET SOLDIERS REPORT BIG VICTORY

London, Nov. 12.—The following Bolshevik War Office communique was received by wireless from Moscow today: "The Soviet troops have broken General Denikin's front over a line of forty-seven miles. One division has advanced 105 miles in three days." General Denikin's forces are opposing the Reds on the Southern and Southwestern fronts.

RUSSIAN LEADERS TAKEN DURING CHICAGO RAIDS

Chicago, Nov. 12—Ten men, including the alleged leader of the Chicago branch of the union of Russian workers, are held by federal authorities here following a raid on what federal agents say is the Chicago headquarters of the organization.

The raid was a part of the government's war on foreign political agitators. Those taken in the raid will be deported, federal authorities say.

ELEVEN NEGRO RIOTERS SENTENCED TO DEATH

Helena, Ark., Nov. 12.—Eleven Negroes, convicted last week of murder in the first degree in connection with the Negro uprising at Elaine, were sentenced by Judge Jackson to be electrocuted.

A heavily armed guard was thrown about the courtroom when the negroes were brought up for sentence.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS BY FRANK VINING SMITH

Those who love the great outdoors will find much satisfaction in the pictures now on exhibition in Doll & Richards' Gallery on Newbury street. The artist, Frank Vining Smith of Boston, has shown with much sympathy and strength a wide range of subjects, dealing mainly with New England's varied coast line. A new exhibitor in the galleries, Mr. Smith's work has been well known for years in illustration. "Thunder Heads" has a salty atmosphere, with its sand dunes and big masses of moving cloud, while in "Weed and Tide" the green and rush of moving water is very realistic. In contrast to the tropic scenes of "Uncharted Seas" is the impression of cold and snow in "Winter Gale." The pictures will remain on view until November 18.

RIFLE BULLET KILLS CONCORD BOY OF 14

Concord, Nov. 12—William N. Carter, fourteen, of this town, was shot and killed while playing with a number of comrades in West Bedford, according to the police. John Grant, who lives on Bedford street, near the Carter home, was said by the authorities to have accidentally fired the fatal shot from a .22-calibre rifle. The other boys in the party were Wilfred Monson, twelve; Arthur Monson, ten; Stanley Mansfield, nine, all of Concord, and Joseph Lanigan, twelve, of Concord Junction.

Police Admit Error, Seek Jobs Through Chamber

The Police Placement Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which Bernard J. Rothwell is chairman, is sending to the business men of Greater Boston, requests that they find places for some of the former city policemen.

The committee states that a number of former policemen have already been placed in positions through this organization, and that employers report they are giving satisfactory service. The men seeking an opportunity to start over again are said to be of an excellent type, and capable of valuable service.

The committee points out that usually they are men who went out at the last moment, unwillingly, that they freely admit their error, and only ask a chance to make good.

WASHINGTON IS WON BY SMILES OF PRINCE

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 12—The same bashful smile and boyish demeanor which won for the Prince of Wales the adulation of Canada is making him a popular prince in Washington. Everyone, from officials down to doorkeepers, scramble to get a look at the titled visitor.

The prince is enjoying his American trip—his first official visit to a foreign country. "I find Americans the same as Canadians and Englishmen," he says.

The second day on American soil was a comparatively tight one for the prince, as compared to the round of events with which one of his days usually is featured. He inspected the new Red Cross Building, visited the Lincoln Memorial and the Walter Reed General Hospital, where hundreds of soldiers wounded in the war are recuperating.

Tonight he will be the guest of honor at a State dinner given by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing. The congressional reception carded for last night will be held tonight, after the Lansing dinner.

GIRLS CLAD BY NATURE BATHE IN RESERVOIR

Not Enough Clothes to Qualify in "Shimmy," Says Sober New Jerseyite

New York, Nov. 12—Staid townsfolk and public officials of the Caldwells and Verona in Northern New Jersey know not whether to be amused, amazed or aghast over the discovery yesterday that the high school girls are bathing in the county reservoir.

Oh, but that isn't the best—or the worst—of it! Many of the maidens plunge into the metal clear waters without enough covering to qualify them as shimmy dancers.

From Montclair Normal, Verona High, and the upper grades of the Verona schools they throng, after classes are dismissed and at weekends, for a clandestine swim, more or less far from masculine eyes. And the oddest part of it is that the townsfolk served by the Essex Falls Reservoir believe their water supply to be far superior to that of Montclair, which is served by the Little Falls system.

A sober citizen strolling through the woods discovered a bevy of girls preparing for a plunge. They had scampered up the slope of what is locally known as the second Orange mountain, taken a short cut through the forest, off the automobile road, and were aiming toward the reservoir. The reservoir is sunk in the crest of the mountain. Around it is a wire fence, apparently an impassable barrier. But the girls laughingly leaped at it and swarmed over the top with skill born of experience.

There was the swishing sound of garments hastily doffed, a gleeful flicker of white against the sky line, a flash of pink through the air and—kersplash! The girls were streaking toward the centre of the lake like minnows. Were it not that in Essex County prohibition really prohibits, the aforesaid sober citizen would have doubted his own sobriety.

Half a dozen piles of outer and inner raiment decked the edge of the reservoir, and as many bundles of books, neatly strapped, lay beside them. The swimmers, unaware of the witness, frolicked about in the water.

Within a mile lies the Essex Falls Country Club, whose membership boasts many wealthy New Yorkers.

words can of how deeply Mr. Phelan feels about the good done each year by the basket fund. His letter follows:

"Having been a contributor to your Christmas Basket Fund from the time you first established this very worthy movement, and therefore having followed to some extent its results by observing the tremendous good it has done, I am again very glad indeed to contribute to the fund this year. It is with pleasure that I hand you herewith my check for $100.

"We should at all times be ready to help the less fortunate, but especially at Christmas we should try to bring some cheer into the families of the needy.

"Very truly yours,

(Signed) "JAMES J. PHELAN."

PELLETIER SENDS CHECK.

Another prominent Bostonian who believes the Boston American's Christmas Basket Fund does lots of good is District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier. He contributed $10.

The American is in receipt of several letters calling attention to needy families to whom a basket of food on Christmas Day will be a blessing. Even families of men who fought for this country in the recent World War are beginning to feel the pinch of poverty. A woman whose husband saw service in France writes: "Will you please try and send us a basket for Christmas as we have three children and my husband is unable to work. He went to France and is suffering from being gassed by mustard gas. We have to get along the best we can. We would be much obliged to you if you will send us a basket of food."

From a little girl of thirteen came a pathetic letter telling of the struggle her mother is making to keep her family of eight children together. The father is ill and can no longer provide for them. The girl's letter follows:

"Dear Sir—If you are giving away any baskets this year please don't forget my mama, as my father has been put away and there are eight of us to keep. My mother has a terrible hard time to get along. I am the oldest, thirteen years, and the baby is twenty months. My mother does the best she can to keep us all together, so if you don't send us a basket we won't have any. Hoping to hear from you, and God bless you, I remain."

MANY CASES PATHETIC.

Does any reader doubt that the poor, weary mother of this little girl is having a tough time to get along? You, Mr. Bachelor, who think you are having a hard time on account of high prices to pay the bills for only yourself—what do you think of that mother and her eight children? Don't you think it would take the courage out of you if you had a real problem like that to face? And you, Mr. Man, who have no one to provide for but your wife and perhaps a single child, how would you feel if you were in the position of that mother of eight?

There are many more pathetic cases. Over in the North End there is a widow with three young children. A neighbor calls attention to the case. The widow's husband died several months ago from poisoning, leaving her no money. "It is very hard for them to get along," says the neighbor, "as things are so high. The oldest is a boy five and one-half years old, and the others are a girl four years old and a baby eleven months old. Won't you kindly remember her and her children at Christmas?"

What strength there is in that simple appeal of the kindly neighbor, who, without doubt, has herself helped the brave mother and her three little kiddies many times. How many readers intend to pass by that pathetic request—"Won't you kindly remember her and her children at Christmas?"

PAY NO CANVASSERS.

There is plenty of suffering among the poor this Fall—far too much. It is to try to lift their burden for one day at least—the day on which everyone endeavors to be as happy as possible, even though the morrow brings the same old struggle for existence.

Warning is issued by the Boston American to the public not to pay canvassers. No canvassers are authorized to go about asking for donations. All contributions should be sent directly to the BOSTON AMERICAN CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

LAWRENCE MAY LOSE TROLLEY SERVICE

Eastern Massachusetts Trustees Issue Ultimatum That Jitneys Must Be Barred by City

Unless jitneys are practically eliminated in the city of Lawrence trolley car service will be withdrawn, according to an ultimatum issued today by the public trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

The city is given until November 26 to comply with the terms of the ultimatum.

Financial losses in the Lawrence district are assigned as the cause of the move. The discontinuance of service will affect not only all local but most of the interurban lines.

The ultimatum is in the form of a letter signed by Homer Loring, chairman of the trustees, and addressed to Mayor John J. Hurley of Lawrence.

LOSE $25,000 A MONTH.

It is, in part, as follows:

"We regret to inform you that during September the Lawrence District failed to earn operating expenses and depreciation. The loss was caused entirely by unrestricted jitney traffic permitted by the City Council. A careful estimate shows that unrestricted jitneys are entirely responsible for a monthly loss to this publicly-controlled street railway of $25,000 per month or $300,000 a year.

"You know that the public trustees have no funds available for the operation of any district at a loss. The public trustees appreciate the earnest efforts of the Chamber of Commerce and Citizens' Committee to bring about reasonable jitney regulations, but the financial condition of the Lawrence district makes an immediate decision necessary.

TAKE OFF CARS NOV. 26.

"The time has come when Lawrence must choose between street railway and jitney services. The earnings in October were less than in September, and the public trustees are unable longer to run the district at a loss.

"We are, therefore obliged to notify you that on effective measures to restrict jitney competition are adopted the 26th day of November, street railway service on all local lines and most of the interurban lines will be discontinued on and after that date."

4,750,000 Pounds of Sugar Arrives, and More Is Coming

The American steamship Lake Fernwood arrived in Boston today with 4,750,000 pounds of raw sugar from Manzanillo, Cuba.

The Fernwood proceeded directly to the American Sugar Refinery docks in Fort Point Channel, and began discharging the cargo.

Other cargoes of Cuban sugar are on the way to Boston and other Northern ports, it was announced.

WHY RUN-DOWN PALE EXHAUSTED WOMEN SHOULD TAKE IRON

"There can be no beautiful, healthy, rose-cheeked, steady nerved women without iron. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks—their charm and attractiveness depart. I always insist that my patients take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for metallic iron which often corrodes the stomach and does more harm than good. Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard women in ten weeks' time in many cases. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results."—Ferdinand King, M.D., well-known New York Physician and medical author. Rheumatism Relief--25c.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), Are Helping Thousands Who Tried Expensive Things Without Result. It's Guaranteed.

There are three vital processes of human existence,—the digestion of food, the extraction of nourishment from it and the elimination of waste. Poor digestion and assimilation means failure to derive full nourishment from food and that in turn often means impoverished blood, weakness, anemia, etc. Poor elimination means an accumulation of waste matter which poisons the body, lowers vitality, decreases the power of resistance to disease and leads to the development of many serious ills.

Rheumatism,—due to some interference with the process of elimination, failure to get rid of certain body poisons,—cannot be expected to yield to any medicine that fails to correct the condition responsible for it. Could any reasonable person expect to rid himself of rheumatic pain as long as rheumatic poison is allowed to remain in the body.

Think of this. It explains the success of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) in so many cases where other medicines have failed. Thousands are using NR Tablets every day and getting relief. Why pay five or ten times as much for uncertain things? A 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), containing enough to last twenty-five days—must help you, must give you prompt relief and satisfactory benefit or cost you nothing.

Nature's Remedy is not only for the relief of rheumatism. It improves digestion, tones the liver, regulates kidney and bowel action, improves the blood and cleanses the system. You've tried the expensive medicines and doctors, now make the real test. You'll get results this time. Just try it. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

SOLDIERS TRY TO WRECK CORK BUT FAIL

Dublin, Nov. 12.—Complete details of the rioting at Cork show that soldiers of the Shropshire regiment attempted to wreck the city and that they did immense damage.

The troops marched boldly out of their barracks near Cork, heading straight for the heart of the city. Squadrons of police tried to stop them from entering the town, but they broke through.

Immediately there began a hot engagement with the civilians in the streets, who badly worsted and routed the military invaders. Some of the latter dashed into hotels and theatres, followed by crowds with sticks, stones and all sorts of tools, of which free use was made.

All available police then turned out and charged the citizens. Revolver shots began to fly thick and fast. Provost-Marshal Harris was severely wounded. Then another regiment was summoned. It dashed to the scene of the riot with fixed bayonets, but failed to separate the fighters. For some time the soldiers had the best of the battle. But the civilians finally made a concerted charge and put them to flight.

The troops sought shelter in the railway premises, then proceeded to wreck them, while the crowd waited outside. The conflict lasted several hours here, and at a number of other places, the police charging repeatedly. Finally military pickets were turned out equipped with rioting rifles and fixed bayonets.

Several civilians were wounded and two soldiers had to be taken to the hospital. The rioting troops finally turned back to the barracks, smashing things as they went. Cork was under guard all night.

Dermatologist Gives Complexion Secret

"The great secret of keeping the face young is to keep off the dead cuticle," says Dr. J. Mortimer Mitchell. "As is well known, the surface skin is constantly dying, falling off in imperceptible particles, except in some diseased conditions, when the same appear like dandruff. But the particles do not all drop off immediately they die, being held for a while by the live skin.

"To have the dermatological surgeon peel off the entire outer skin at one time is a painful and expensive operation. The same result is obtained by applying ordinary mercolized wax as you would cold cream, allowing this to remain on over night, then taking it off with warm water, the same as you would cold cream. This process is both painless and inexpensive. The wax which is procurable at your drug store, hastens the absorption of the shedding process. It gradually absorbs the dead and half-dead skin, revealing the new, healthy, youthful-looking skin underneath."—Advertisement.

GIRLS PLANNING HOW TO SPEND PRIZE MONEY

One Providence Lass Will Give All to Grandmother; Another to Try the Movies

Providence, Nov. 12.—If Loretta Staff gets the "virtue prize" she will give the money to "Gram." If Abbie Hamilton is the lucky girl, she will "beat it to New York and try and hook on with a movie concern."

The girls are two of the candidates for the first year's income from the $10,000 bequest of Count Paul Bajnotti, who directed in his will that the money be turned over to the most virtuous "daughter of the common people" in Providence. Loretta lives at No. 21 Second street with her grandmother. Said she:

"Ever since I can remember, my grandmother has brought me up with tender care. She gave me music lessons when the money was needed for necessaries of life. I would even walk home with the money so as to hand it all over to my 'Gram,' if I am the lucky girl."

Abbie Hamilton is a Brighton street girl with motion picture ambitions. "I am not forcing myself into the contest," she said today, "but would not pass up the money if the Mayor looked my way."

Meanwhile, Mayor Gainer's office is being flooded with letters from aspirants for the role of husband to the prize winner. Here is the plea of a Boston man:

"I was married twice and my wives both left me—not my fault. I am only fifty-nine, and never smoked, drank or chewed tobacco in my life. I am a loving man and jealousy may have caused my trouble. I am willing to share my happiness with the girl you pick out and we can start to buy a home with the money."

"Some of the nimbies believe we have opened a matrimonial bureau," said a tired clerk. "If this thing keeps up we'll need larger quarters, and will be fit subjects for the 'hoo-by-hatch.'"

$2,000,000 "GAME" LOCATED IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 12.—Police of this city located an elaborately equipped clubhouse believed to be the headquarters of "big game" confidence men, who have garnered, it is estimated, about $2,000,000 in operations from coast to coast during the past several years.

Too "Heavenly" on Island for Yankee "Crusoes"

New York, Nov. 12.—"That island was too dod-blasted beautiful. It was great for a while. But we want to get back to Connecticut and see some rocks and hickory trees and barren fields." This was Captain J. Irving Maxson's explanation of his reasons for giving up the modified Robinson Crusoe life he and his wife have been leading on the Isle of Pines, off the Cuban coast, since 1912. Mrs. Maxson expressed the same sentiment as her husband.

"It was really too heavenly," she said. "We just thought we'd like to experience a New England Winter once more, with snow and sleet and turkey, cranberries and pumpkin pies. So here we are on our way back to Stonington."

Captain Maxson, a retired seafaring man, conceived the idea in 1912 that life in the tropics was the real thing. His wife had the same idea. So they put all the household goods on board a schooner and landed on the Isle of Pines, which, as the captain said, "is the garden spot of the world." But he got "tired of it."

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

PAPER SHORTAGE ALARMS U. S. PUBLISHERS

Conference in New York to Devise Means of Overcoming Acute Stringency

By International News Service.

New York, Nov. 12.—A special meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, representative of the major portion of the newspaper industry of the United States, was in session in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria today to devise means to overcome an acute stringency in the supply of newsprint, the paper upon which newspapers are printed.

Frank P. Glass of Birmingham, Ala., president of the association, called the meeting to order. More than 300 newspaper publishers were in attendance.

Mr. Glass stated that his special call for a meeting of publishers had been prompted by a critical situation in the industry as regards newsprint supply and expressed the hope that through the united action of publishers a system might be found which would stabilize general newspaper production and protect all publishers from the serious shortage.

PROSPERITY HITS SUPPLY.

Mr. Glass said that since the signing of the armistice newsprint consumption has increased in the United States about 25 per cent., while some newspapers have doubled their volume of advertising. General commercial prosperity following the war, a wide diversity of new enterprises and expansion of established concerns to meet post-war reconstruction conditions were stated by Mr. Glass as among the causes of the increased volume of newspaper advertising.

To meet the extraordinary need of the public for newspaper publicity Mr. Glass said newsprint manufacturers had gone to the limit of their resources to increase newsprint production, but the amount of newsprint that is now produced is only 5 per cent. greater than before the war.

"One result of this disparity between the use of newsprint and its production," said Mr. Glass, "is tremendously increased price. Paper costs the average publisher today three or four times what it did before the war. However, it is not so much a question of price with us today as it is the necessity of procuring a sufficient supply with which to meet the public demand for advertising, and at the same time do justice to newspaper readers in the matter of additional volume in these days of great news developments."

The publishers were polled this afternoon on whether they were in favor of restrictive measures being employed as to the volume of advertising to be carried. The vote showed that 60 per cent. of the publishers present favored such a move, while 40 per cent. were against it.

WOULD LIMIT SIZE OF PAPERS.

Mr. Glass told the conference that while the A. N. P. A. officials had no definite preconceived plan to meet the situation, he was prepared to offer a number of recommendations to the membership for consideration.

He suggested the possibility of stringent regulation by all newspaper publishers of the size of their publications consistent with the available supply of newsprint. Just how this could be operated was a matter that could be decided by the publishers themselves, he said.

President Glass believed that some action might be taken by the publishers to induce the government to act upon a waterpower bill now before Congress, the effect of which would be the immediate establishment of many newspaper mills, particularly in the Northwest and in Alaska. Improved reciprocal relations between the Canadian government and the American government for the importation of Canadian stock was also suggested.

A general discussion of means of meeting the situation followed President Glass' opening remarks.

NEW BEDFORD GUARDSMAN PUTS BULLET IN LEG

While examining a loaded revolver in the guardroom of the Mattapan police station, Alfred Carter, a nineteen-year-old State Guardsman of the Second Company, 14th Regiment, was accidentally shot in the right leg, when the piece was discharged.

Carter, whose home is at No. 285 Davis street, New Bedford, was removed to the City Hospital.

ROPE OR BULLETS FOR REDS, SAYS GARY MAYOR

Gary, Ind., Nov. 12.—"It may be all right to deport the Reds, I. W. W. and Communists who are threatening to overturn our government, but I am inclined to think that ten cents' worth of rope or three cents' worth of ammunition would be speedier and more effective."

Mayor W. F. Hodges expressed himself of this opinion in an address to 5,000 soldiers and citizens following a review of the Armistice Day parade here. The remark was cheered for several minutes.

BODIES OF 111 BOLSHEVIKI VICTIMS ARRIVE TONIGHT

New York, Nov. 12.—The transport Lake Daraga, bearing the bodies of 111 American soldiers killed in battle with the Bolsheviki in the Archangel sector from Armistice Day, 1918, until the Americans left Archangel last June, will dock at midnight, according to a wireless message from the transport. Among the bodies aboard is that of Edward McConvill of New Bedford, Mass.

12,000 EMPLOYES STRIKE; SHUT PARIS BIG STORES

Paris, Nov. 12.—The three biggest department stores of Paris are virtually shut down today as a result of a strike of their employes. Those of the Louvre went out in sympathy with the employes of the Bon Marche and the Galeries Lafayette, bringing the total number of strikers up to 12,000.

Burn Jail in Mendon to Celebrate End of World War

Mendon, Nov. 12.—After two unsuccessful attempts, the Armistice Day celebrators, last evening, succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the two Selectmen long enough to burn down the stay by eight brick jail, which has been out of use for several years.

Numerous attempts had been made during Fourth of July and other celebrations to destroy the former lockup, but somehow the old structure stood its ground and refused to give up the ghost. Such prisoners that the town produced have been lodged in the Milford jail.

GIVEN JAIL TERM FOR ASSAULT ON OFFICER

Judge Palmer in Roxbury Court today, in dealing with the case of John Doyle, of Shirley street, Roxbury, charged with sauntering and loitering carrying a dirk and with assault on a police officer, emphasized the fact it was a serious thing to be charged with such offence and that he would not tolerate such acts. Doyle was found guilty and fined $5 on the loitering charge, sentenced to six months for carrying the dirk, and given one month additional on the assault charge. He appealed and was held in $1,100 for the Superior Court. The complainant against Doyle were made by Patrolman Charles E. Monier, a new colored policeman. He testified he ordered Doyle to move along. Doyle, he said pulled a dirk and turned on him. The officer used his club on Doyle's head. Doyle was treated at the City Hospital.

TRAIL OF DEATH CAR FIRST REAL CLEW IN DR. DEAN MYSTERY

By BERT FORD.

The death car is the first real link of evidence in the Dean mystery. It will be recalled that Game Warden George E. Willington found freshly broken twigs and footprints in the fields and a stone in a wall dislodged and that this trail led from automobile tracks discovered in a siding off the old Peterboro wood road and across lots to the barn where Dr. William Kendrick Dean was murdered. Charles A. Bean, employed at a tack factory in East Jaffrey, said:

"I saw Dr. Dean at the village on the evening of August 13, 1918, when he was doing his shopping. Later that night, while sitting on my front stoop I saw an automobile down the street. I heard it toot twice. I saw a light turned on in front of ——— barn and I heard a carriage drive out and pass down the road.

"It was then about 10:30 p. m. It was followed by the automobile. I am positive that it was not Dr. Dean's carriage because his hitch had rubber tires and this one had steel tires. I knew the gait of the horse well.

"It was smarter than Dr. Dean's horse. I knew who's rig it was, but I am not positive who was in it.

"After I made made my statement to the Federal agents, Deputy Sheriff Emerson came to me and asked me to sign a paper, which I did, and I discovered later that it was different from the one I made my first statement. I did not read the paper. I signed it after he had put questions to me which I had answered before."

Bean's story concerning a carriage and an automobile was corroborated by Everett Bingham, who lives on the fork of the old Peterboro road. The records in the case credit Bingham with stating that he was resting on a porch hammock at 10:30 on the night of the murder, and that at 10:45 he heard a wagon pass, followed by an automobile.

He said he heard, and when he arose went into the house and noticed that it was 11:30. He said that the sound of the automobile which he heard was heavier than that of a Ford.

The mysterious car seen by Watchman Bibeau of the Cotton mill and Dan LaRose at midnight in the village was of medium size and resembled an Overland.

Robert Hamil, owner of a garage and blacksmith shop near the East Jaffrey railroad station, said:

"On the night that Dr. Dean was killed I decided to sleep on a porch hammock where I often slept, as it was a very hot night. I soon fell asleep. I don't know how long I slept, but it must have been in the neighborhood of midnight that I was awakened by the sound of an automobile coming down the old Peterboro road toward the village.

WENT INDOORS.

"My house is on an elevation close to the junction of River street and the Peterboro turnpike and a few minutes' walk from Main street. The automobile had its dimmers on. I noticed that in particular. It was headed in the direction of Main street, but I don't know whether it went that far. After seeing the car I decided to sleep indoors and went to my bedroom."

Jean Bibeau, night watchman at White's Cotton Mill, at the junction of Main and River streets, and overlooking the village square, also saw a mysterious automobile that night. Singularly, he sighted it on River street a few minutes after midnight and within a few yards of the place where Hamil lost sight of it from his porch. Bibeau is a Frenchman. He has a good reputation and is conservative. He said:

"I was at work in the boilar room when I heard the town clock strike twelve, just as it is sounding now. You can hear it very plain here. I make my rounds through the mill every hour and that is when I hear the clock. On the night Dr. Dean was murdered, the clock struck twelve and I took my lantern and walked from the boiler room here to the corner of River street and up River street to the wooden building which I go to first.

"As soon as I fased up the road, I noticed an automobile with only one headlight. It was then about two minutes after twelve. The automobile was on the hill just before it reached the hollow in the road. They slowed up when they saw my light. I got that impression strong, but I didn't think much about the automobile at the time because I didn't know about the murder.

ONE HEADLIGHT.

"I thought it was funny to have them stop and to only have one headlight. That's why I remember it so well. I went into the wooden building, and, when I came out to go into the brick building, the car had passed and was stopped at the corner right near the watering trough with the front facing up Main street toward the bank.

"It did not notice any rear light. I went into the main part of the mill, and that automobile must have stood there fifteen minutes. It takes me about fifteen or twenty minutes to make my rounds. As I came along each floor, starting from the top, I could see through the windows that it was still there.

"When I came out of the mill to return to the boiler room, I saw that the car was still there and that there were three men in it. I could hear them talking.

"Asked if he recognized any of the voices, Bibeau smiled, knowingly, and then said:

"I could not be sure. I was not near enough to see their faces. After I heard of the murder, it all came back to me, and I wished I had walked nearer to the car in returning to the boiler room."

Daniel LaRose and Louis Cormoyer were in the square late that night. LaRose went to a store that remains open late, to get cigarettes, and noticed the automobile, which Jean Bibeau saw, drawn up near the watering trough.

RECOGNIZED ONE MAN.

LaRose told the Selectmen and the Federal agents that he thought he was in the car and that he recognized one of them. LaRose was out of town when the murder was committed, but a friend of his, Charles A. Bean, claimed that LaRose said to him:

"I guess I put it too strong when I gave my statement because some of them called me a damn liar."

LaRose told many of his friends what he saw that night and it dovetailed with Jean Bibeau's testimony and with Hamil's statement.

An automobile could reach Dean's home from the village in fifteen or twenty minutes at night. The crime could have been committed, the body bound and dropped in the cistern and the murderers be back in the village within an hour, but they had more time than that.

The tracks found on the old Peterboro wood road by Game Warden Wellington, after the murder, showed that an automobile had been driven into a siding off the highway and the location fitted with footprints and broken twigs in the fields.

It is obvious that the car seen who rode in that automobile did not wish to be too conspicuous on the old Peterboro road, but that once they reached Main street, they could be less cautious as the car might be thought by pedestrians to have come from any direction there.

Automobile parties from Keene to East Jaffrey, late at night, are uncommon. The manner in which the occupants of the death car turned the dimmers, and the fact that they had only one headlight on and slowed down when they saw Jean Bibeau's light indicated that the persons in that automobile had reason to be wary that night.

NO REASON FOR DIMMERS.

Otherwise they would have driven at ordinary speed, and with all lights on, as required by law.

The mysterious car was met at midnight on a deserted road with nothing moving ahead.

That automobile carried the murderers of Dr. Dean, or it was stealing into town. All the facts prove that.

Charles L. Rich, cashier of the Shednanock Savings Bank at East Jaffrey, one of Dr. Dean's most intimate friends for nearly thirty years and his financial adviser, who told the authorities that he did not leave the house after supper on the night of August 12, 1918, was apparently in error, as he was seen on Main street at 9:45 p. m. that night by Margaret and Annie Costello, close neighbors, who had run out hurriedly, mailen thinking that it would be of service to him, not knowing that he had been attacked by a vicious dog an earlier hour.

One of the Costello girls was sitting on her porch, which is close to the street, and her sister was watering the lawn with the hose at 9:45 p. m. and was standing within a few feet of Mr. Rich when he passed her, headed toward Main street, and returned ten or fifteen minutes later.

Mr. Rich also visited the store of William T. Leighton, the local undertaker, at eight o'clock the next morning, several hours before the body of Dr. Dean was found. Mr. Leighton said:

"There has been enough talk already, but I do think something ought to be done about it. There are features that puzzle me.

"Mr. Rich came into my store at eight o'clock on the morning of August 14. He asked me if I was going up to Dean's. I asked him what for. He told me that Dean was dead and I'd better go on to get the job. I told him I had heard nothing about it and that I would not go until sent for. I said it was not my custom to hunt up jobs.

"Mr. Rich asked me if I was going up in my automobile, and said he would like to go with me. I said that if he made up a general party I would be glad to take them up as I have a large car. I said I could not go right away but would meet them about 11 o'clock and that I would eat a lunch at home before we went.

"When I came with my car he, his wife and sister-in-law were there to go and we went to the Dean place. I helped haul out the body from the cistern. The medical referee and two other doctors made post-mortem examinations of the body and Dr. Baker made notes with a fountain pen.

"They agreed on those notes that death was due to strangulation. I was there when the body was exhumed later at the request of the brother. There are certain things that I cannot get out of my mind in connection with this case. The sooner it is cleared up the better."

Mr. Rich had telephoned Attorney-General Young that Mrs. Dean had telephoned him that Dr. Dean was dead. Replacement made to Attorney-General Young was written down by the latter and is among the many records of the case.

In this statement, Mr. Rich said:

"In the morning I heard that Dean was dead. I called Mrs. Dean and said: 'I want to speak with Billie.' She said, 'You can't, Billie is dead.' Whereupon I said, 'Dead, what kind she replied 'diver by the deep water.'"

When examined at the headquarters of the United States Department of Justice in Boston later, Mr. Rich made another statement to the effect that he first learned of the Dean tragedy at 11 o'clock the following morning from a neighbor.

In his statement to Attorney-General Young he did not explain who had told him of Dr. Dean's death, which information prompted him to call up Mrs. Dear, nor did he state the time he learned of his friend's death.

An agent of the Department of Justice questioned Mr. Rich on this point and the Federal record reads thus:

Q.—What time did Mrs. Dean tell you Mr. Dean was lost? A.—I just can't tell what time it was, as I have no way of fixing it except that this time was around 11 o'clock that a neighbor telephoned to me and wanted to know if we knew that Mr. Dean was away. I began to get busy and we were right down to see the undertaker's and happened to see W. T. Leighton. I thought Mr. Dean was dead and that he would know it as quick as anybody.

Q.—Who was the neighbor who telephoned? A.—I think Miss Henchman. She is assistant cashier at the bank. Her sister talked with Mrs. Dean and said something should be done, so she telephoned to us, as I understand it.

TALKED WITH MISS HENCHMAN.

Q.—What was the telephone Miss Henchman sent? A.—Do you know what Mrs. Dean is saying?

Q.—And that is what Miss Henchman telephoned? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where was Miss Henchman at that time? A.—At the farm.

Q.—What farm? A.—The Henchman farm.

Q.—That is near Dean's? A.—No, but it is one of the back roads. It is a half-mile nearer the main road.

Q.—And what did she say? Who telephoned to her? A.—Mrs. Dean, I suppose. She stated, "Do you know what Mrs. Dean is saying?" and I think I heard her say, "I want Mr. Henchman to come up and look after the stock. They have a horse or two and some turkeys and some chickens."

Q.—That is what Mrs. Dean wanted Mr. Henchman for and that only by hearsay? A.—That is all I heard. That is why she telephoned to Henchman.

Q.—She didn't telephone to you at all? A.—No, she didn't, but as Mr. Leighton didn't know anything about it, I thought I would speak to Mrs. Dean by telephone, and she said that Mr. Dean was dead.

According to this testimony, Mr. Rich claimed he did not see Undertaker Leighton until 11 o'clock, and that even at that time he wasn't sure whether Dr. Dean was dead. This does not dovetail with Undertaker Leighton's statement that Mr. Rich came into his place at eight that morning and told him that Dr. Dean was dead.

Mr. Rich appeared on the street next morning with a black eye and lacerated cheek. He claimed that his horse kicked him the night before. Neighbors claimed that he gave different stories of the accident.

Leaders Announce Mass Meeting for Next Tuesday Night, in Symphony Hall

Determined to carry on their campaign for a flat raise of $600 for everyone, the "Teachers' Advisory Council announces a mass meeting in Symphony Hall next Tuesday evening, at which the teachers will present their side of the question to the public.

Following a meeting of the council at which it was unanimously voted to reject the school committee's offer of a $144 raise and continue the fight for a $600 increase, it was announced that efforts are being made to have the school committee reconsider the question at a meeting some night this week.

Speaking for the council, Joseph M. Lynch stated that if the school committee declines to reconsider the question efforts will be made to take the matter to the Legislature, over the heads of the school committee. Plans for furthering the campaign for a $600 raise have been formulated, he stated, and this campaign will be carried out with vigor.

TEACHERS GIVEN $200 RAISE IN MARLBORO

Special Committee Acts, Following Powerful Campaign by the American

Marlboro, Nov. 12.—School teachers of this city will receive an annual increase of $200 as a result of the recommendation of a special committee, following a campaign instituted by the Boston American.

It was announced today that the raises will take effect immediately, the money to come from a fund of $10,000, which is Marlboro's share of the State income tax.

The special committee, consisting of Mayor Charles F. McCarthy, Noe Peloquin and Frank Gurney, made their recommendation after an exhaustive investigation of conditions under which teachers live.

The American's campaign for higher salaries for teachers started about two months ago and lasted one week. During that time it was pointed out by the American that the pay of the average teacher was less than one-half of that of the average laborer, teachers receiving $21 a week and laborers $39.

It was also shown that the teachers received less pay than girls employed in factories, and that it was frequently necessary for them to work in summer hotels in order to eke out their livelihood.

Peace Song of Poet-Laureate Comes One Year Late

By ROBERT BRIDGES,
Poet-Laureate of Great Britain.

London, Nov. 12.—
If though forget that wine they shed,
Thy sons on land and sea,
Mother of all our hallowed dead,
Shall peace return on thee?

Look on the fields they left so fair,
The hills their passion crowned;
Then bow a nation's altars there,
And there thy peace is found.

The laureat burst forth with his peace song exactly one year after the armistice. Previous efforts to stir the genius of the British official poet were unavailing. He remained silent even when his silence provoked gentle flicks from the floor of the House of Commons; even when the irrepressible Horatio Bottomley asked the government if it might not be well to increase the ancient allowance of canary wine to the laureate in order to stimulate his muse.

"Would you like to live on two pounds (less than $10) per week?"

"No," replied the Viscountess without hesitation. "But would you buy doing what I am doing if you had what I have?"

Woman Sick Two Years Tells How She Got Well

Miss O. I. Reed of 30 Glenville ave., Allston, Mass., writes: "I have been sick almost two years, had four doctors with little or no relief. I was growing thin every day, went from 138 to 111. I was so discouraged I didn't know what to do. One night, about three weeks ago, I picked up a paper and saw your Dr. True's Elixir, Family Laxative and Worm Expeller advertised. I made up my mind it had worms, and the next day bought a small bottle of Dr. True's Elixir. I was surprised at the result. Actually worms some a finger long, so much slime, that looked as though it was just the skin of worms. The day before I took Dr. True's Elixir I thought I should go wild with the crawling in my stomach. I feel like a new person, all my troubles say I am much better, and my daughters have believed another month will cure me. I can't give your medicine praise enough."

Signs of worms: Offensive breath, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, deranged stomach, occasional griping and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, grey heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, red points on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever. Curling Hair Like This Promotes Its Health

For those whose hair is straight and limp nothing better could be recommended than the slimerine method. This insures a beautiful curliness which is perfectly natural in appearance, and the health of the hair is not affected as when the heated iron is used. A few ounces of liquid slimerine—which consists of cocoanut oil, bay rum and castile—lasts a long time, so it is quite economical to use. It is pleasant to use, too, being neither sticky nor greasy, and is easily applied with a clean tooth brush. The hair should be moistened the full length before slimerining.

The pretty wavy effect in evidence in the morning is surprising to those who try this simple method the first time. The liquid also serves as an excellent dressing, giving the hair a delightful gloss.—Advertisement.

Be Rid of That "BadBack"

WHY be miserable with a bad back? Get rid of it! You can't be happy when every day brings morning lameness; sharp, shooting pains, and a dull, nagging, everpresent ache. There's surely a reason why you feel so badly. Likely it's weak kidneys. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too—a weak, tired, depressed feeling, and perhaps some kidney irregularities. Don't wait for gravel, dropsy or serious Bright's disease to set in. Get back your health and keep it. You can't afford to lose time experimenting with an unknown remedy. Try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. They have done wonders in scores of cases right here in Boston for people you either know or can look up. Ask your neighbor!

Boston People Tell How

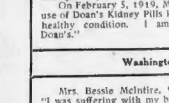
Emerson St. (South Boston)

J. M. Brewer, 270 Emerson St., South Boston, says: "It has been a long time since I have had to use Doan's Kidney Pills, but I know well of their good benefit. I used Doan's for backache and stiffness in the kidney region with good results. This medicine has never failed to remove the pains in my back and regulate my kidneys." (Statement given March 20, 1916.)

On February 5, 1919, Mr. Brewer said: "Occasional use of Doan's Kidney Pills keeps my kidneys in a good healthy condition. I am always glad to endorse Doan's."

Washington Street

Mrs. Bessie McIntire, 995 Washington St., says: "I was troubled with my back, caused by my kidneys being weak. I couldn't bend but what sharp pains would dart through my back, and to lift anything and even my housework was a burden. Nights I would wake many times feeling miserable, and I couldn't lie in one position long without being nervous. When I got up mornings I was stiff and lame and I felt dizzy and tired. I took many remedies without good results, and one day I received a copy of Doan's Directory. Reading of the good accounts I was induced to try them. I purchased a box and was greatly helped. After taking four boxes I was relieved entirely."



No package of Doan's Kidney Pills is genuine unless it bears the maple-leaf trade-mark and the signature—"James Doan."

Paris St. (East Boston)

Mrs. A. Lavery, 66 Paris street, East Boston, says: "I always recommend Doan's Kidney Pills when I hear anyone complain of kidney trouble. I know from experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are just as represented. I had backaches almost daily and felt dull and tired out. Frequent headaches and dizziness annoyed me and my kidneys acted irregularly. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills made my back well and strong and put my kidneys in good shape."

Trenton St. (East Boston)

Herbert E. Irving, 143 Trenton St., East Boston, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are the best remedy I have ever used for kidney trouble. Often my kidneys got out of fix and I was so sore and lame, I could hardly get out of bed mornings. My back ached and pained and my kidneys didn't act right at all. A couple of boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved all the soreness and aching in my back and put my kidneys in good order. I often recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

West Springfield Street

W. S. Kelton, 133 W. Springfield street, says: "I know there is nothing better for kidney trouble than Doan's Kidney Pills. My kidneys caused me to suffer considerably and I was crippled up with pains across my back so I couldn't straighten up. It was hard for me to get about. My kidneys didn't act right and the secretions were at times too free in passage, and then again they were scanty. I used about six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and my kidneys were put in good shape, the aches and pains left my back, and I felt like a different person."

London, Nov. 12.—The middle class of England, or the "general public" as this group of citizenry is called in the United States, is organizing for its own protection.

English people are reading with keen interest how the "general public" in the United States is suffering hardships from strikes and high prices and increasing taxation, and they have taken the lead in an effort to show the middle classes of other countries the way out of their difficulties.

Kennedy Jones, M. P., leading organizer of the Middle Classes Union, today outlined some of the aims of the organization. It has been created to correct abuses, and it intends to exercise consumer power in parliamentary and municipal elections to protect the interests of the people.

BACKBONE WITHOUT FORCE.

"Who are the middle classes?" Mr. Jones was asked. "What can they do if they combine and organize?" He replied:

"To my mind the middle classes are all of those unorganized citizens who stand between the organized and the federated manual workers on the one hand, and the smaller but almost equally powerful class of organized and consolidated capitalists on the other. They are that large body in the nation which is composed of those who work with their heads rather than with their hands, and in which by far the greater part of the national brain is concentrated.

"They comprise all of the professions, learned and otherwise, shopkeepers and clerks and those who manage industries and business of every sort. To the middle class belong the sailor and soldier, the minister of religion, the doctor, the lawyer and the stock broker, the artist, the architect, the actor and the journalist, the author of great works and the man or woman whose writings are confined to the accountant's ledger.

"They are the backbone of the body politic, but backbone without force or life, in that each vertebra is separate and fit only for the game of knuckle bones for the street urchin. The middle classes' union has been born to correct this deplorable weakness and it purposes by parliamentary and municipal activity to safeguard the rights of every section of these interests with which it is associated.

COULD TIE UP BUSINESS.

"Consider this great body of citizens, men and women, fully organized, an army under the direction of elected officers of the M. C. U., and imagine for a moment that it became necessary in their own defence to declare a general strike.

"What would happen? Not a shop not a bank, not a church, not a hospital, not a dispensary, not a theatre, not a cinema, would open. The whole business and pleasure of the country would stop. This is carrying self-protection to its logical conclusion. But it is unnecessary, certainly at this time.

"I cite it to show what could be done. There is a more immediate point of view, which can best be illustrated by the story of a man home from a rough mining camp in Western America. Said a friend to him: 'That must have been a wild and lawless spot. You are lucky you got away alive.'

"'Nonsense,' replied the man from the mining camp; 'it is not by any means wild and lawless. Quite the contrary. I never saw such fair behavior and fair dealing—nothing but courtesy.'

"'How do you account for that?'

"'Well, it is like this,' replied the man from the mining camp. 'They are all civil to each other because everyone carries a gun.'"

PREDICT LABOR'S DEATH IF RADICALS PREVAIL

Columbus, O., Nov. 12.—"There will be no organized labor in this country within five years unless the American Federation of Labor sweeps house pretty soon and gets rid of its radical and un-American elements," United States District Attorney Bolin declared today. The statement constituted part of a petition Special Bolin which resulted in 135 steam-shovel workers in Ohio coal mines, near Hopedale, returning to work.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Ladies! Try this! Darkens beautifully and nobody can tell—Brings back its gloss and youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the additions of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You simply draw a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

SALEM AND DANVERS MILL STRIKERS RETURN

About 1,800 hands returned to work in the Naumkeag Mills in Salem and the Danvers Hosiery in Peabody today. They had been on strike for the past seven weeks and had declined to accept various proposals to return to work until today. The conditions under which the workers returned are said to be agreeable to both employer and employe alike.

Millions of Germs

Breed in Tooth Film—Keep It Off

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Film Wrecks the Teeth

THAT slimy film which you feel with your tongue causes most tooth troubles. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. In crevices and elsewhere that film clings. That is why your brushing fails to keep teeth white, free from tartar, clean and safe.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So all these troubles have been increasing despite the wide use of the tooth brush.

Dental science, after years of search, has found a film combatant. Able authorities have amply proved this by careful clinical tests. Leading dentists everywhere now urge its daily use.

The method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we offer a 10-Day Tube free now to everyone for home tests.

See the Results, Then Decide

The results of Pepsodent are quickly apparent. Some are instant. We ask you to see them—watch them ten days—then decide for yourself about them.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless, activating method. The inventor has been granted patents by five governments already. It is that invention which makes possible this efficient film combatant.

BARRIE PLAY A CHARMING FANTASY

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

I don't know how it affects other people, but I always leave a Barrie play with the same clean and purified feeling with which I emerge from a bathtub.

Whatever else this great playwright may be distinguished for in his various plays he may always be depended upon to supply wholesomeness, sweetness, a magic knowledge of humanity, and a gentle whimsicality.

"Dear Brutus," which William Gillette is presenting at the Hollis, is in many respects the cleverest and most original of all the long line of clever and original plays from the pen of the Scotch dramatist.

There was a tired business man sitting close to me. He was rather a bewildered business man as the evening wore on, and like the general run of "I. B. M.'s he disapproved of what he didn't understand. When the curtain fell he said that "Dear Brutus" was a mess of rubbish.

Of course, this play was not intended for him, nor that other large class of theatregoers with the servant-girl point of view. If you don't use your brain to think with, if you are proxy and matter of fact, if you are not willing to meet a fantastic idea half way and encourage it, if you don't know how to make believe, stay away from "Dear Brutus."

But if you have an imagination, if you have a hankering fondness for fairies, and are not ashamed of a little sentiment, you will enjoy "Dear Brutus" and you must not miss it.

For Mr. Lob, the host of the house party in this play, is a real fairy, or at least an elf or gnome. He is suspected of being Puck himself, who could put a girdle around the earth in forty minutes, according to that eminent authority, Shakespeare. And he possesses an enchanted forest into which people may wonder and live for a while the lives they might have lived had they not taken a wrong turning at one time or another.

To be sure, the lives that might have been did not differ much from those that are, but there was one exception. An elderly wastrel of an artist might have been a happy man had he married another wife and really possessed the dream daughter he met in the woods.

Others have had as weird and fantastic notions as J. M. Barrie, and have tried to put them on the stage. But no living man possesses the technical skill of the Scotch playwright, no one else understands how to bewitch an audience into accepting the utterly impossible and believing nonsense for a while.

Gillette's methods do not vary any more than those of William Hodge, and he is the same individual in "Dear Brutus," which he was in "A Successful Calamity" and a long line of plays. But the public loves his quiet and refined artistry, and is certainly is very effective in the role of the man who met a dream daughter in the woods.

William Podmore, as Lob, requires praise for a very original conception of a most bizarre character. Madge Bellamy, as the might have been daughter, was a font of undiluted sweetness, a very charming little actress indeed. Hilda Moore, as the unsuccessful wife, brought distinction to a difficult part. Violet Kemble Cooper, Ann Morrison, Marie Wainwright, Grant Stewart, Thomas Braiden and Frances Anderson complete an unusually capable cast.

MODERN AND BEACON — Three great stars, Irene Castle, Dorothy Gish and Fatty Arbuckle, compose the bill at the Modern and Boston. Mrs. Castle is seen in "The Invisible Bond." Miss Gish in "Turning the Tables," and Fatty Arbuckle in "The Hayseed."

Waive Law to Permit Boys' Choir to Give Concert Here

Master Luigi di Tommaso Pacchelli, leading soprano of the Sistine Chapel, who will be heard in Mechanics Hall on November 30.

Assurances have been received that there will be no opposition to permitting the Vatican Choir to bring eight choir boys under the age of fifteen to Boston for the Mechanics Hall concert on November 30.

When the child labor bill was framed it was seen that it would prevent school exhibitions, religious exercises, graduations and similar events in which children participated and it was provided that upon the option of the mayor and city council of a city or selectmen of a town such exhibitions might be given.

The concert of the Vatican Choir comes under the head of a church exhibition, as the boys are members of the choirs of St. Peter's, St. John's Lateran and the Sistine Chapel at Rome.

Plays That Remain

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—This is the last week of Holbrook Blinn in "The Challenge," Eugene Walter's powerful drama of capital and labor.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—Florence Moore ends her long run in "Breakfast in Bed" at the Plymouth this week.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—The "Shubert Galeties" have entered upon the second week of their engagement. It is a lively show full of comedy and pretty girls.

COLONIAL THEATRE — George White's "Scandals" began its last fortnight with its same crowded houses which have greeted former performances of this breezy jazz show.

SYMPHONY HALL — Only three days more of "The Confession," Hal Reid's great photo-drama, at Symphony Hall.

PARK THEATRE—George Loane Tucker's very remarkable picture, "The Miracle Man," continues for this week and ends its engagement on Saturday.

"HAMLET" IS REVIVED BY SOTHERN

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe opened their second and last week of Shakespearian revival at the Boston Opera House in "Hamlet," before a large and fashionable audience.

Mr. Sothern's characterization of the young prince saw him at his best. He read his lines with fluency and excellent diction and interpreted with cultivated excellence the philosophy and wit of the play.

The emotions marking the tragic incidents in his young life were admirably brought out and at no time did he delay under the great strain upon him. In the scenes in which he is confronted with the ghost of his father his interpretations of the young prince's emotions were par excellence.

Miss Marlowe's excellent voice, a voice that is distinctly different in pitch to the average tragedienne, and which seems to improve as it matures, and her excellent impersonation of the dutiful, bewildered and unfortunate Ophelia, won much applause. She shared generously in the plaudits bestowed upon her husband and fellow worker. In her two great scenes, particularly the mad scene, she was admirable.

Frederick Lewis was again seen as Horatio, a part he has played opposite Mr. Sothern for a number of years past. As the first grave digger, Rowland Buckstone interpolated plenty of droll wit in the last scene but one.

"Hamlet" will be repeated Saturday afternoon.

MUSICAL COMEDY HEADS KEITH BILL

A tabloid musical comedy, "Extra Dry," is the principal offering at Keith's this week. The idea of the piece is not new but it serves to introduce a sextette of pretty show girls in daring costumes. The most noteworthy feature of this brief revue is the closing number, "Music," sung by Jess Mendelson. The song itself has merit and six popular operas are represented by the show girls.

Joe Laurie, Jr., entertained the audience with fifteen minutes of confidential chatter, while Miller and Mack, as "The Bing Boys," have an eccentric slap-stick affair.

The Misses Santos and Hays present a very laughable skit which they call "The Health Hunters." The double chin of Miss Santos and the double voice of Miss Hays are featured. Mabel Burke, assisted by Sidney Forbes, gives a revue of old-time and modern songs for the audience to decide which type it prefers.

"Mrs. Wellington's Surprise" is a hotel bedroom farce with complications, but after a succession of clever lines everyone is cleared before the curtain drops. Countess Verona performs upon the cimbalon, a stringed instrument resembling the harpsichord.

Martyn and Florence open the bill with a novelty tennis court act. Percy Athos and Greta Read, artistic roller skaters, bring back memories of the old roller rink days.

Al Jolson Coming

The fortnight's engagement of Al Jolson in "Sinbad" at the Boston Opera House is likely to be a record-breaker, judging by the advance sale, which opened Monday at the Opera House. Jolson returns with the same troupe which he brought here last Spring.

NEW COMEDY PLEASES AT TREMONT

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

"Three Wise Fools," a melodramatic comedy by Austin Strong, is the attraction at the Tremont this week. This play enjoyed a long run in New York and is likely to prove as big a popular hit here as it did there.

In European capitals they rather classify theatres; at certain houses in Paris you can be sure of finding a certain kind of play, at others quite a different sort. Here in America we get our plays as they come. Hence the Tremont last week housed "The Marquis of Priola," an ingenious but nasty comedy, oversophisticated and devoid of morality, while now it offers "Three Wise Fools" a sweet and ingenuous little play as clean as new mown hay and as open as a church door on Sunday.

Austin Strong's play is better constructed than most of the dramas of its type, pieces which are built to please the great American dollar spender. It is sentimental, but not sugary and its characters are not so noble that they bore you stiff, as they did in "Daddy Long-Legs" and pieces of that ilk.

Three crusty old bachelors who live in a big house in Washington Square, New York, have a ward thrust upon them, the daughter of an old sweetheart, whom they accept without question and whom they quickly come to love.

"When you fear that the play is descending into vapidity, the precious ward begins to act suspiciously and by the end of the second act she has convinced the three old gentlemen that they have been entertaining a lady crook unawares.

Only the nephew of the cruetest of the three old men keeps his faith in the young woman, a faith which is justified in time to catch the 11 o'clock car for home.

The characters of the three wise fools are admirably delineated by the author and played with skill and spirit by Claude Gillingwater, Harry Davenport and Howard Gould. The lines are unusually bright and the verbal clashes of one of the ancients and his nephew are always side-splitting.

Helen Menken plays the ingenuous and trusting ward who gets mistrusted. I have no fault to find with her acting but that she is the type to create such havoc in a household consisting of three cantankerous bachelors I wasn't in the least convinced.

Samuel E. Hines did a good bit as a murderously inclined escaped convict. Charles Lalte, as the nephew, made an excellent impression. There were several very unimpressive policemen. We have been educated to expect our police to be funny and these were not even mildly amusing.

"FAUST" OPENS OPERA SEASON AT ARLINGTON

With "Faust" at the Arlington Theatre, under the direction of Edward M. Beck, the Boston English Opera Company opened this week what is to be a Winter of opera given in English. It is hoped by the management that its production may make opera more familiar to all classes of theatregoers.

"Faust" was auspiciously selected for beginning. This is true both of the music and the traditions of the opera at its latest rendering in English at the Arlington. There is in the plot enough of the dramatic situation to make "Faust" a spoken drama of intense interest were the music left aside.

The players at the Arlington not only sang with dramatic feeling, but acted so as well.

The Faust of Joseph A. Sheehan, already known and admired in Boston, for his work in Savage productions, was virile, a Faust that appealed to the hearts and to the minds of the spectators. The Marguerite of Miss Hazel Eden was demure and awakened as the opera progressed. The Mephistopheles of Dillon Shallard was debonair. The Siebel of Miss Alice May Carley was touched with human appeal. The Valentine of Stanley Deacon should not be left unmentioned.

At times the action dragged a bit. The principals were a trifle mature, in some instances, for the parts they played.

Other Theatres

GORDON'S OLYMPIA — Aurora Maridganian, in the thrilling drama, "Lasting of Louis," is the feature, and a very excellent vaudeville bill at Gordon's Olympia Theatre.

GLOBE THEATRE—June Elvidge is appearing in person at the Globe this week, and is the star of the big film, "The Poison Pen." Constance Binney, in "Erstwhile Susan," is another big feature.

MUSICAL SHOW SCORES AT SHUBERT

A farce, set to music, and called "Oh, What a Girl," had its initial performance in this city at the Shubert Theatre and was very well received on its opening night by an audience that seemed ever ready to be entertained.

The book and lyrics are by Edgar Smith and Edward Clark, while Charles Jules and Jacques Presburg are responsible for the melodies. The show is one where girls and music predominate, although the latter, save for one number, "Dainty Little Girl," is quite commonplace.

The rise of the curtain shows a group of young men friends of the hero, Jack Rushton, playing poker, and, unusual or a "T. R. M." show, not a girl appears on the stage for the space of a few moments.

The absence of the feminine members was markedly noticeable, and the action dragged heavily and seemed as though it would never warm up and get going. This fault and repeated acts at different times during the entire four scenes in the two acts.

For a musical show, it contains a surprising amount of plot, all built around Rushton's love for a cabaret singer, Margot Merrivale, who has ambitions to see her name in electric lights on Broadway.

Harry Kelley, certainly no stranger in this city, plays the part of the deacon in his own inimitable style and was perhaps the brightest spot in the action. His comedy is always good and this vehicle affords him plenty of opportunity to display it.

Frank Fay as Bill Corcoran, chum of Rushton's, is especially good, and his line of New York patter and his dialogue and business with Amanda, exceptionally well played by Elizabeth Moffat, was very well done. On several occasions he kept life in the performance.

A Home Made Gray Hair Remedy

Gray, streaked or faded hair can be immediately made black, brown or light brown, whichever shade you desire, by the use of the following remedy that you can make at home.

Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extras to buy. Dissolve it in 4 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for use and a $100.00 gold bond come in each box guaranteeing the user that Orlex powder does not contain silver, lead, zinc, sulphur, mercury, aniline, coaltar products or their derivatives.

It is safe, does not rub off, is not sticky or gummy and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger.—Advertisement.

LEADING PARIS PAPERS SHUT DOWN BY STRIKE

Paris, Nov. 12.—The newspaper workers' strike went into effect and only two morning papers appeared. One was a composite journal, "La Presse de Paris," to which the non-striking staff papers contributed, and the other was the Socialist organ, Humanite. Police are guarding the newspaper offices.

J. P. Collins' XMAS SALE

Starts TOMORROW WITH BIG BARGAINS

There is an old saying, "The early bird catches the worm." If you act on this saying you will order your piano for Christmas as early as you can this year, before stock is depleted and while quick delivery is possible. I will make no trade agreement to hold prices up during the holiday season; on the contrary I will agree with any dealer or dealers to keep prices down. This jumping up prices upon the slightest pretext is going to prove a boomerang in some quarters. Believe me, the public is getting painfully tired of profiteering. Me for lowest prices.

Criticism and Citizenship

It is the plain, public duty of every citizen to criticize proposed government measures believed to be harmful.

Swift & Company is in a better position perhaps, than others, to understand the meat packing business in all its relations to public and private interests, even though the others may have been giving the subject a great deal of sincere attention.

Swift & Company is convinced that interference with its legitimate business function by governmental agencies, however well intentioned, would be an injury to every man, woman and child who wants meat to eat, as well as to the men who raise the meat and to those who dress and distribute it.

Maximum service that cannot monopolize because of keen competition and lack of control over sources of supply is furnished at a minimum of profit—a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources.

Therefore Swift & Company is taking every legitimate step of citizenship to prevent such interference.

These advertisements are intended to help you, and to help Congress decide what is best to be done. Mistakes are costly and apt to be harmful in these trying times.

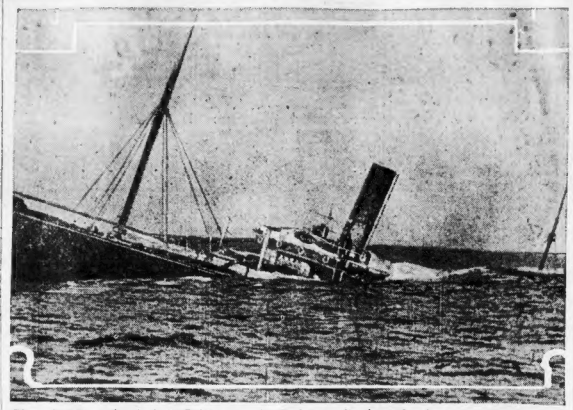
HEARST NEWS FILM 'SCOOP' SHOWS SHIPS SINKING UNDER U-BOAT FIRE



Photo, by International, shows British steamship Parkgate going down by the stern. The Parkgate was torpedoed and shelled.

The most remarkable motion picture news feature "scoop" ever achieved, showing the actual sinking of merchant ships by German submarines, forms part of the "Hearst News No. 46," released in Boston theatres today.

These pictures were made by German submarine commanders as proof that they were carrying out their orders to destroy merchant ships, and are being shown exclusively as part of this extraordinarily interesting Hearst news feature.

"Hearst News No. 46" should prove of much local interest, too, because of its views of last week's high tide at Winthrop, which caused residents of Point Shirley to move and wrought havoc with the Winthrop seawall.

The submarine pictures, now being shown in this city for the first time, formed part of the official archives of the imperial German government, and were brought to this country by J. H. Mackrum, Knights of Columbus secretary with the American Army of Occupation.

The film shows interesting "close-ups" of the U-boats in action. They also show a British tramp steamer attacked by a U-boat. The actual firing on the tramp is vividly shown and the steamer is seen to settle slowly until her decks are level with the sea. Then a bomb explodes in the hold, scattering wreckage in every direction.

Another scene shows a British freighter being halted by a shot across her bow. The captain and mate, who refuse to leave the ship, are seen standing at the stern as she sinks with several big holes made by shots below her water line.

Other features of this sensational news feature are views of the dedication of the Sacre Coeur Cathedral at Paris, Miss Adrian Mayer being kissed by General Pershing and an unusual auto race at El Paso, Texas.

CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY ASKS AID

Officials of the Boston Children's Friend Society have sent out an appeal for funds, through a letter signed by Mrs. Gabri L. Stone, chairman of the appeal committee. "During the war the children of Europe needed you," the letter runs. "Now our children need you, and we ask your friendship for them. Our money is carefully expended, and does not pay for extravagant offices, as we are still using our old building at No. 48 Rutland street. The money goes directly to help the children."

A campaign is on foot to raise $150,000. Checks should be made payable to the Boston Children's Friend Society or to William C. Chick, treasurer, and should be mailed to Mrs. Galen L. Stone, No. 48 Rutland street, Boston.

HOOVER WARNS U. S. MAY BAR IMMIGRANTS

Tells Polish Conference if Reforms Are Needed American-Born Can Carry Them Out

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Warning that America's door to European immigrants may be partly closed and that a prejudice may grow up in this country against any person speaking a foreign tongue because of the destructive activities of foreign agitators, was sounded today by Herbert Hoover in an address before the Polish conference here.

Mr. Hoover's remarks upon the citizenship obligations of foreigners in the United States were regarded as timely in view of the I. W. W. outbreak at Centralia, Wash., yesterday in which four soldiers were shot by I. W. W. agitators.

After telling of the relief work in Poland and her future needs, Mr. Hoover said:

"You and your ancestors have come to the United States to free yourselves from oppression and to participate in a country of greater prosperity and high standard of living. You have been given the privilege of entrance into this community without restrictions and you have been benefited by its blessings. It is right that you should have a tender heart for the country of your origin, but your first and primary duty is to the country of your adoption.

"The people of the United States are today themselves facing great difficulties of social and industrial character. If we are to solve these difficulties, it will be by the undivided support of our institutions from which we have obtained the blessings we now enjoy.

"Many foolish ideas are being circulated amongst the foreign-born population of the United States. Many of these foreign born are interesting themselves in the destruction of our primary institutions and defiance of our laws. The American people are fast losing patience with this attitude. It may develop out of this that the 'open door' towards Europe will be in large measure closed. But worse than this, there may develop out of it a prejudice against any speaker of a foreign language in the United States. It creates prejudice against extending aid to those countries in Europe from which our foreign-born populations spring.

"If reforms are needed in the United States, they will be carried out by those whose parents are grown up amidst our institutions."

FREEZING WEATHER IS DUE AGAIN ON FRIDAY

It as colder today in Southern Texas than in Southern New England, temperatures in the former locality ranging below freezing. New England's mild temperature probably will last through tomorrow, with cloudiness and probably local rains tonight. Tomorrow will be fair with moderate south to west winds, and Friday morning, says the weather man, Boston should have freezing temperature. The cold wave that struck Texas today is central in the Dakotas. Swift Current, British Northwest, was 14 below zero; North Platt, Neb., 8 below. The warmest place in the country was Key West, Fla., at 76 degrees. New England's warmest points were Hartford, Ct., and Block Island, at 52, and the coldest, Greenville, Me., at 26.

REBUILT DENBYS DELIGHT MOTOR TRUCK TRADE

V. P. Woodbridge, Local Distributor, Says Demand for Machines Greater Than Ever

"The motor truck business in Boston, and in fact all this territory, is exceedingly good," says W. P. Woodbridge, the local Denby distributor. Of course it is necessary to take used trucks in trade for new ones and we have been selling a number of them at getting these trucks in shape for the sale is a week.

"Instead of turning the truck over just as we receive it, we put it through our shop and practically rebuild every vehicle we take in trade. When this truck is put on our salesroom floor for sale it carries with it a new car guarantee. We find that this is the only way to do business and do it right.

"While we cannot rebuild other makes than Denby which we take in trade, we do put them in good shape, but can give no guarantee like we can on our own trucks.

"The unusual demand for heavy-duty trucks shows that there is a lot of building going on, and this all means business. Most of the trucks in the floor is to speed up the sale. Soon as we get the proper men taken for new jobs it is the answer to everything in the proper manner, and shows that it pays the dealer to do it right."

AUTOISTS URGED TO GET PLATES EARLY

All records are being broken by the Highway Commission in the application of automobile registration for 1920, and those who have not as yet, desiring new numbers on their cars, their application at once.

The commissioner announces delays that have been met in past years and was prepared on October 1 to start distribution. In one day recently 2,700 pairs of plates were delivered. The work is unusually heavy, however, and the commissioners desire motorists to be patient if they be somewhat delayed.

There are on hand for distribution 1,000 pairs of plates for passenger cars, 40,000 pairs for trucks, 10,000 pairs for motorcycles, 1,000 pairs for automobiles for hire, and 1,000 pairs for dealers. These can be easily broken.

Motorists are warned that an application made prior to October 1 after January 1, when the penalties are in force, between the first of the year and the end of February

BRITISH PRINCE RIDES IN MINUTE MAN SIX

Residents of Nanaimo, British Columbia, were treated to a rare treat a few days ago when they saw the Prince of Wales, with a happy smile on his face, traveling the streets of Nanaimo in a Lexington Minute Man six.

The sight of His Royal Highness in a car named in honor of the minute men of 1776 was to them symbolic of the change that has come in the relations between the United States and Great Britain in the 137 years since the Revolutionary War.

The sight brought with it a realization of the friendship that was sealed anew in Flanders and on many other battlefields, only a few months ago when the sons of John Bull and of Uncle Sam fought side by side against the common foe.

ASK MR. FIXIT

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a 1916 Ford car that has had no cleaning or repairing for 500 miles. It has the Ford motor and if there are fairly good I have not had any trouble with it. Ought I to clean, adjust, tighten, valves, mixture

Is my trouble due to high compression? Will a new set of rings overcome this? Is the compression of smaller or larger than mine? What make of rings would you advise? Will you explain it? Is it possible to be fooled by compression by trying it out, even if it appears that it is? If so, how? Ring and yet under heavy load pull? Engine power?

I might say after I have cleaned the carbon I can run all day with my car on high gear or slow. Can run as low as two miles an hour and get up to 30 or more. Advise what the replacement I have.

Mass. C. C. E.

If you are sure you have a 1916 model you have the new type head, which gives you a larger compression chamber. 1916 models began with No. 2,100,000. If your car number is less than this you may have 1917 car and you might have compression trouble. Your car cannot be radically wrong when you can get 30 miles to the gallon and go after cleaning the carbon out. Are you using a good grade of motor gravity oil? If your rings were bad you would not get good compression, although it is possible to be fooled by the appearance of a Ford. A carbon eliminator attached to your car will help you. If you have a 1917 model put another gasket under your head and that will help it to increase the compression somewhat. You might try this by taking two gaskets and placing shellac between them to prevent the gaskets and the surface of the head. Your car does remarkably well on mileage and power when clean. Also it does not require quite enough oil to keep the carbon out. You must remember that the grade of gasoline used now makes the carbonizer more quickly than in years previous.

You better look at your piston rings also, to be sure they are O. K. If you are getting so much oil due to leaky rings, this will account for the carbon and yet you might be deceived as to compression. Sometimes a motor will run and perform fairly well with a cracked ring which is not apparent till the cylinders have been removed.

The breaking caused by carbon come from the gas in the carbon deposit formed in the head of the cylinders and on the pistons becomes heated to the point where it is hot enough to ignite the charge of gas before the arrival of the spark, and this has a tendency to force the piston back against the regular movement, which will show up any looseness in the crankshaft, making a pounding and rattling in the crank shaft and also reducing the speed of the motor.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a 1911 model 46 Overland roadster. What do you think of the engine number? Have overhauled it and found segments from Hercules to Dan. Please answer. Also what makes a noise when running about 25 miles per hour. Would adjusting the magneto do any good? Magneto is timed to fire when breaks 3/32 of an in. Have replaced the cam, cam roller opened one-half inch. I have a Ford touring car and would like to trade it down on one of the Overland roadsters. Would you advise me to do so? Also how to hold valve reversing sometimes jerks back when running. Would like to know how to adjust it so it will stop that. The machine did not have this trouble before.

CHAS. W. Haverhill

The serial number is as it should be under it on the right hand side. That motor is all right as far as the number goes. The noise you may be due to loose tappets or guides which can be repaired. It may also come from a spark knock as you have your spark too far ahead. Set the spark at 20. Retarding should be 20-1000 of an inch or a little less than 1/32 inch. Your motor at high speeds do not lock and you have to hold your foot on the reverse pedal all the time. Probably the reverse gear bands are a little tight and need to be worked on. Also the clutch bands a little when the bands are applied. Try to loosen up the reverse spring a little and oiled the transmission bearings for the present.

Mr. Fixit: A relative of mine has a Ford car and I would like to know if he can get insurance. What rate he would have to pay and what kind of insurance would be right?

Cambridge

If you are insured in a first-class company and your car is equipped with a proper locking device you get full amount, otherwise the value is figured 25%. There are some companies that insure for a lower rate and only pay 80 per cent of the valuation.

Dear Mr. Fixit—What is the principal difference between a 2, 3 or 4 cycle engine?

What are engine used in 8 and 12-cylinder cars? Is the crankshaft for 8 and 12-cylinders? W. N. P. Atlantic, Mass.

The 2-cycle engine makes the charge and compresses it on one stroke and fires and exhausts the cylinder on the other. In other words it does in two strokes of the piston, or two complete cycles what a 4-cylinder motor does in four strokes.

Eight and twelve-cylinder motors have one crankshaft. By "engine" I presume you mean the offset cylinders. This is done to save space primarily. If you had twelve cylinders set one after the other you would have an extremely long motor.

Some one from Avery, Mass., wrote about a Ford but signed no name. It is one of the rules that all communications must be signed to receive attention. Kindly do so and your query will be answered.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I have a 1917 Ford which seems to jump and jerk going up hill. It seems as if it did not get enough gas. I have cleaned the tank and tried a new carburetor, but it is just the same. It runs all right on the level and has plenty of power. It also is hard to start in cold weather—seems very stiff.

A. E. M., Mattapan

You have either a cracked porcelain on your spark plugs or else the points are not the right distance. The points on the spark plug should be the thickness of a thin dime apart or about 1-32 of an inch. If too wide or too close together you might get the results you have. Feel sure if you look after these two things you will locate your trouble. It is possible for a car to work pretty well on the level, with cracked porcelains in the plugs, but it will not run under high compression or slow engine speed such as you would get climbing a hill. Leave your car in high at night and then release the clutch in the morning and work the pedals several times. This will help if your stiffness comes from transmission binding.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I have a 1919 Henderson motorcycle which has recently developed a decided "flapping" in the motor. Noticeable only at medium speeds and hardly existing during spark helps it. Shows upon long grades and steep use. C. H., Boston

Your description, which I have cut down in length, seems to indicate loose connecting rod bearings. Take these up and also clean carbon from cylinders.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a 1917 Dodge. I ran the car in the barn and the next morning could not start it. Batteries are good. I put in a new one but it fails to start. Possibly the starting switch is at fault. Please advise

If you had drove in a rain storm possibly you have seen water in the coil, which has formed rust and shorted it. Your high tension coil terminal may be cracked. You may have loose connections, the coil may be burned out or the condenser gone. You will have to start in on the electrical system and eliminate to find the trouble.

Answer to R. H. M., Dorchester. The Y. M. C. A. would be the best place to learn vulcanizing and battery work. I believe they have night classes, which would be just what you want.

CHARGES PIAZZA CAUSED INJURIES; ASKS $2,000

Cornelius O'Connor of Somerville has been sued for $2,000 by Margaret LeClair of Boston. She alleges that on May 14, 1918, she was injured owing to the defective condition of a rear piazza on the defendant's property at No. 90 Myrtle street, Somerville.

COMING MOTOR SHOW IN N. Y. TO ATTRACT MANY FARMERS

While thousands of merchants, manufacturers, dealers and others interested in motor transportation are coming to New York from all parts of the country for the National Motor Truck show, to be held in the 8th Coast Artillery armory January 3-11, the interest already displayed by farmers in the show indicates that a very large portion of the visitors will come from the rural districts. They are coming not only to see the several hundred trucks to be exhibited by leading manufacturers, but also to attend the big transportation conference which will be a feature of the show.

Farmers are the greatest truck users in America, and it is but natural that they should be interested in this monster truck used in hauling farm products. In the past farmers were discouraged from producing anything they could not sell in large quantities and from attempting to market the surplus of perishable products they may have above their own needs because they lacked means of transportation. Today all this is changed through the use of the motor truck.

COMEDY STAR JOINS RUBBER MAGNATE

Funmaker Buys Stock in Penn. Company, Now Headed by Gunnery Rival

Years ago—and we will not go into detail sufficiently to say just how many years—Fred Stone was a struggling "nance" in and Simon G. Lewis was food salesman for the Schlueter Manufacturing Arms Company. These two figures of their former days in the sport of trap and field shooting became fast friends. In the course of time Stone's path frequently met in cities throughout the United States and at first only now and then with Lewis.

Now Fred Stone at the pinnacle of his profession on America's beloved and favorite comedian, while Simon G. Lewis is the president and general manager of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, manufacturers of Vacuum Cup Tires.

Not content with being the owner of an office building and other valuable real estate in New York, it's great comedian has also invested in Pennsylvania Rubber Company stock, which has put it in the list of the largest original stockholders. In February 1920 progressed to such an extent that it is possible for a one to work pretty well on the level, with cracked porcelains in the plugs, but it will not run under high compression or slow engine speed such as you would get climbing a hill. Leave your car in high at night and then release the clutch in the morning and work the pedals several times. This will help if your stiffness comes from transmission binding.

EXIDE BATTERY WINS FAVOR THROUGH ITS UNBREAKABILITY

"The storage battery, in the mind of the average layman, is apt to mean a "black box of mystery" mounted on his automobile to start his motor and furnish current for his lights. He is very apt to regard the battery as being delicate in construction, whereas the storage battery actually is today playing a very important part in the most strenuous service. "As an instance of this the mine locomotive may be cited," says Louis Barrett, Service Depot, Exide Battery Company.

"In practically every mining district fleets of husky electric locomotives operated entirely upon the power of storage batteries, will be found placing the empties in the mine rooms, and then gathering the loaded cars together, making up the loaded trains for his heavier team mate, the electric trolley locomotive, to haul to the tipple.

"This mine service is usually severe and the battery must be exceptionally rugged to withstand the bumps and jumps. The tracks, as a rule, are bad and frequent head-on collisions occur. The battery has made a wonderful record. In the past there has been but one serious objection, the battery's jars would sometimes crack under an unusually severe pull.

"The Electric Storage Battery Company, manufacturers of the Ironclad-Exide battery, realizing this, has for some time been experimenting to develop an unbreakable jar. What is known as the Giant jar is the result.

"This is made of a semi-flexible compound, exceptionally tough and strong. Exhaustive tests have proved that these Giant jars will stand a pressure of 2,000 pounds at their weakest point whereas the old type jar broke at less than 1,000 pounds. If the Giant jar will support at its weakest point the weight of four husky men, whereas the old jar would not support the weight of one man; that an electrical test of 30,000 volts does not puncture the Giant Jar."

URGE AUTOISTS TO BUY GOODS FROM FARMS

Government Backs Roadside Market Week From November 15 to 22

Considerable interest is being centered in the "farm-to-table movement" which will be carried on the week preceding Thanksgiving, November 15 to 22. The entire machinery of the government is actively engaged in trying to reduce the high cost of living, and just now with conditions as they are, no movement could be more appropriate or important than from the farm to the table.

Much has been said on roadside marketing and, in some parts of the country, it has developed to quite a degree and with such great success that everyone is now urged to utilize their motor trips into the country to purchase produce from the farmer at his gate, thereby establishing a profitable and close relation between the farmer and the consumer.

Hundreds of thousands of motor trucks are taken every week for recreational purposes only. The farm-to-table movement urges the motorists to turn these trips to good use and put in a utilitarian way by purchasing eggs, butter, poultry, fruit and vegetables at the farmer's gate. It will mean fresh products during the season at a reasonable price to the consumer, a big percentage of these products never reaching the farmer's gate but passing through the hands of middlemen and profiteers. It is therefore hoped that all organizations throughout the country will take up the movement and encourage the farmers to establish roadside markets and place signboards at their gates showing what they have to sell. The market will not only be able to sell their fresh products during the season at a reasonable price to the consumer, but will also establish a feeling of mutual interest and good will between the farmer and the consumer.

TIGER WILL BE LOOKING FOR FUMBLED PUNT SATURDAY

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Some adding machines as they figure up weekly royalties will become the chief concern of Yale football coaches should they ever attempt playwriting.

As everyone knows, suspense as to the ultimate outcome of the plot constitutes the success-bringing quality in the dramatic art, and the author who can keep his audience a-quiver scores a knock-'em-dead hit, every time he hits his pen. And that is just what Yale coaches have been doing for many years.

Attend the weekly football drama at Yale bowl and you never know, until the play has ended, whether the player taking the leading role will be suitably garnished with olive branches and borne from the arena in a hero's chariot, or will be led shame-facedly forth lashed to the harness end of a goat leash.

This suspense is produced by the persistence of Eli mentors placing the entire responsibility of handling punts in the hands of one ill-protected Yale player, usually the Yale quarterback.

It's a sweet assignment that chap draws. Here at peace with the world [illegible] mind [illegible] he sees his hands himself way down [illegible] field along, with a weaving swerving, powerfully-driven football skyrocketing his way, and eleven opponents tearing at him, knowing as he certainly must, that a fumble may mean a touchdown against the Yale [illegible]. Yet that is the position of [illegible] quarterback, not only once [illegible] [illegible] game, but a score or more [illegible].

HARD TO EXPLAIN.

Just why Yale coaches continue year after year, to take such risks has never been clearly explained. Scarcely a season passes but some Eli opponent profits thereby and there have been instances where fumbles by the lone Yale receiver have led to Yale defeats. In fact, there are few teams on Yale schedules who do not count on a favorable break developing through Yale's punt-receiving system and in consequence [illegible] backs and tackles to race down [illegible] and recover [illegible] football basis.

It is safe to say Princeton, the team Yale will face Saturday, is being specially drilled to benefit by such possible happenings. And as "Fido" Kempton, the Eli quarterback, misused several Brown punts in the recent Yale-Brown game, Princeton points, perhaps enough to win the game, may be produced in such a manner.

If [illegible] breaks come to the Tigers, Yale should win its first big game.

LINES NEARLY EQUAL.

On paper, provided Stanley Keck, the giant Princeton tackle is in the lineup, the teams are physically equal—the total weight of the lines being, Yale, 1109 pounds, Princeton, 1518 pounds, and the total weight of the backfields [illegible] pounds, Princeton, 643 pounds. In the kicking department, [illegible] Princeton however to start the contest, there seems no decided advantage to either team—each team boasting several men of at least average kicking ability.

It is only when comparing the careers of the two elevens that Yale stands forth as superior to the Tiger.

It [illegible] needed a setback to bring [illegible] Yale's single setback. In its game with Bowdoin [illegible] in the season, [illegible] Bissell eleven has [illegible] on experimental [illegible] backs and one other [illegible] the same purpose, both of which came just prior to its recent game with Harvard, the result being that only during last week did Princeton make any noteworthy progress. Whether Princeton's showing in the Harvard game was the result of sound football on Princeton's part or poor football on Harvard's is a question still open for debate.

SURPRISED HARVARD.

That Princeton's offence took the Crimson completely by surprise is certain, and the efforts of the Harvard line, plainly in evidence during the [illegible] check Princeton's forward-pass attack, were productive of many smiles on the faces of the Indian rooters.

For instance on several occasions, Harvard [illegible] seven men back on the secondary defense, leaving only four men on the line of scrimmage, and had Princeton possessed a rushing attack of any power, Princeton could have gained at will with such plays. Princeton's forte, however, seemed to be in making use of the forward passing plays which Colgate and West Virginia had used against the Tiger, and which Harvard seemed entirely at loss to halt, and Princeton's failure to gain consistently in rushing the ball convinced the majority of individuals that it did not boast any real power in that department of play.

The Yale lineup, in addition to the advantages gained through scouting and building a protection against

PLENTY OF SEATS ON PUBLIC SALE FOR THE BIG DARTMOUTH GAME

Dartmouth's wonderful eleven plays Brown Saturday at Providence, and because of the fitness great undoubtedly the season ticket [illegible] fag is anxious to see Dartmouth in the [illegible] game.

It will be one of the big varsity [illegible] of the season, and in order to secure seats [illegible] to the [illegible] seating capacity of Harvard Field will [illegible] required [illegible] no doubt be [illegible] greater than ever, there are thousands of good seats remaining for the public at Dartmouth Field.

There will remain some fifty-five hundred seats at $2.50 and plenty of good [illegible] seats on the Brown end of the field and a few grandstand seats at the Dartmouth end at $1.65 each. In addition on the day of the game 10,000 admission tickets at $1.00 each go on sale at Stevens Field.

There will remain some of seats for [illegible] Saturday. Nevertheless it is a good idea to drop around to Wright & Ditson's and get YOURS soon.

Keck, Giant Princeton Tackle, Sure to Play Against Yale

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 12

Keck, Princeton's 222-pound tackle who will be in the Tiger lineup against Yale it was announced today. His absence from the line was felt against Harvard last Saturday. Tiger rooters hailed his return to the game with joy.

Princeton's forward pass, has given ample abundance of its ability to overcome an attack built of forward passes. Tufts attempting eighteen overhead heaves against the Elis [illegible] by one of the number, and saw Yale players intercept eight of the remaining seventeen, and although that record surpassed any other the Elis have made in a similar game, other performances by the Elis indicated overhead football cannot be counted on when Yale is the opponent.

FAILED TO BOTHER CRIMSON.

In inaugurating its plays around end or off tackle, Princeton places an end several yards from the line of scrimmage and charges him fatefully into the opposing tackle. With [illegible] in employing light ends [illegible] did not [illegible] Harvard, this play gave little aid to the carrying back, but with Keck in the Princeton lineup and Egler working at one quarter, something in the way of an offense may develop from this end charge. However, Yale had no trouble with the play in 1918 and it is doubted if it will prove successful for Princeton on Saturday.

[illegible] Yale-Brown [illegible] game Yale [illegible] used forward passing [illegible] as well as successful forward pass attack. Against Tufts, Maryland State and Brown it alternated its offensive tactics in counting fashion Yale's rushing attack will meet stiff opposition from the Princeton forwards providing Keck is in the lineup, but Princeton will have to improve considerably in its forward pass defence if it is to check the aerial activities of the Elis.

PSYCHOLOGY OF GAME.

In addition to overcoming Yale's attack and attempting to pierce Yale's defence, the Tiger has to encounter the [illegible] of defeat. More than once admittedly superior teams have fallen a victim of the latter when they have encountered the same, and in recent years this has been particularly true. The teams have met thirty-four times, the three [illegible] won twenty-three times, tied three [illegible] Harvard [illegible] [illegible] equipped with Eli formations, which they are to try out against the varsity later in the week.

Percy Haughton will spend several of the next ten days in the Stadium. His presence will go a great way towards bringing confidence in the right state of mind for the annual clash with Yale. Leo Leary, whose career at Harvard as football coach was intertwined with that of Haughton, may also lend a hand, looking after the ends. Percy's job is no isolator up the defence for forward passing

MAY REORGANIZE BACKFIELD.

Princeton's success with the pass may also cause the reorganization of the varsity backfield. Stanley Burnham, whose stellar work in the Springfield game was stopping the overhead throws, failed at Princeton. The Princeton touchdown was made around Humphrey, and Steele, the [illegible] end, was cleverly kept out of the play.

Coach Fisher doesn't know whether he can depend on Edgar Horween to start at fullback, and in debating the wisdom of transferring Arnold Horween from centre to the backfield if the older Horween gets into shape, the younger may be kept in the line.

BACK WITH SUBS.

Burnham and Charley Havemeyer are the regulars who started the Princeton game, who are now working with the substitutes. Havemeyer is playing centre, and will probably be given a chance to redeem himself in saturday's contest with Tufts. He will have to make giant strides in the next week to oust Arnold Horween, who, the coaches seem to believe, will be the strongest man to snap back the ball against the Elis.

Tufts scored one touchdown in an hour's scrimmage with the second team. Arthur Hamilton making the [illegible] down five plays after Hayard Wharton intercepted the only forward pass of the dozen the scrubs used. The Yale plays went [illegible] against the varsity, although [illegible] the second team did not score.

Captain Murray and Babe Felton kicked the ball after scrimmage, but were not allowed to work hard. E. Horween was in street clothes, and hopes to be in uniform by the end of the week. Dr. Nichols, however, doesn't appear to be as optimistic as the big fullback.

ELI PLAYS USED BY HARVARD SECONDS

Haughton to Assist Fisher in Preparing Crimson for Game With Yale

Captain Tim Callahan, Fido Kempton, Jim Braden, Spider Reinhardt and other Yale varsity football notables are being impersonated at Yale at [illegible] by members of the second football team. Arthur Conion, the second team's chief quarterback, is impersonating the Yale pilot, who, like himself, is an Ezonian. Morrison is the pseudo-Callahan, and so on. Jimmie Knox, coach of the second team, has met with Malcolm Lozan, the quarterback on Charlie Brickley's team, and Bill Banks upon whom have fallen the task of scouting Yale, and the blackjawed Harvard [illegible] [illegible] equipped with Eli formations, which they are to try out against the varsity later in the week.

Percy Haughton will spend several of the next ten days in the Stadium. His presence will go a great way towards bringing confidence in the right state of mind for the annual clash with Yale. Leo Leary, whose career at Harvard as football coach was intertwined with that of Haughton, may also lend a hand, looking after the ends. Percy's job is to isolate up the defence for forward passing

MAY REORGANIZE BACKFIELD.

Princeton's success with the pass may also cause the reorganization of the varsity backfield. Stanley Burnham, whose stellar work in the Springfield game was stopping the overhead throws, failed at Princeton. The Princeton touchdown was made around Humphrey, and Steele, the [illegible] end, was cleverly kept out of the play.

Coach Fisher doesn't know whether he can depend on Edgar Horween to start at fullback, and in debating the wisdom of transferring Arnold Horween from centre to the backfield if the older Horween gets into shape, the younger may be kept in the line.

BACK WITH SUBS.

Burnham and Charley Havemeyer are the regulars who started the Princeton game, who are now working with the substitutes. Havemeyer is playing centre, and will probably be given a chance to redeem himself in saturday's contest with Tufts. He will have to make giant strides in the next week to oust Arnold Horween, who, the coaches seem to believe, will be the strongest man to snap back the ball against the Elis.

Tufts scored one touchdown in an hour's scrimmage with the second team. Arthur Hamilton making the [illegible] down five plays after Hayard Wharton intercepted the only forward pass of the dozen the scrubs used. The Yale plays went [illegible] against the varsity, although [illegible] the second team did not score.

Captain Murray and Babe Felton kicked the ball after scrimmage, but were not allowed to work hard. E. Horween was in street clothes, and hopes to be in uniform by the end of the week. Dr. Nichols, however, doesn't appear to be as optimistic as the big fullback.

METACOMET ARMISTICE DAY GOLF GREAT SUCCESS

ROBERT E. HARLOW.

When the Boston delegation had to leave the attractive Metacomet Golf Club, Providence, George Fotheringham, well known as a professional golfer, was delivering an oration, in which he repeatedly expressed the opinion that everyone was having a great time.

He was right, even if they all were not as good at speech making as George. Metacomet members on their first big effort to their new course, gave sixty-four golfers and 500 spectators a treat that all hope will be repeated. The Armistice Day four-ball best-ball foursome for professionals and amateurs went over with a bang.

The Metacomet course is only a year old but it is well worth any golfer's time. If the sod and sand fit to a shine no one could have asked for better weather. It would have been like summer. As it was, there was little to complain of as most which hung over the fairways easy in the way was gone before noon, and it was warm enough and still enough to suit those who freeze up easily and those who hate to bat them against northeasters.

BIG CASH PRIZES.

More than $400 was given away in cash prizes to the professionals and gifts to the amateurs. Howard Bond was in charge and kept the posters in sight so that all finished before dark.

Fred Elliot of Woodland and Tommy Kerrigan won first honors with a best ball of 71—68—149. Kerrigan took $75 and Elliot a gold watch. Six pairs were tied for second place at 142. They were Larry Paton and Harry Bowler, Jesse Guilford and J. B. Bowker, Alex Smith and George Collett, Alex Campbell and Frank Bond, all W. M. P. Dowell and Fred Bowler and George Murphy and Mike Brady. The professionals played 36 holes and Jesse Guilford taking the amount in place, as he and Bowker, both amateurs, played together.

SPECIAL TO ANDERSON.

After Elliot had taken away the first amateur prize, there were four left, and the six amateurs who were on the teams in the money, drew for the gifts. Paton and McDonald were unlucky.

Carl Anderson of New York won the special prize for breaking the course record. He cut the mark by a shot, getting around in seventy-one. The prize was $25. In the contest for the individual thirty-six hole scores by professionals, Hugh Gordon and Tommy Kerrigan split $50, with cards of 147 and Alex Smith and Carl Anderson split $30 with cards of 152. Jesse Guilford, with 153, led the amateurs in individual scoring.

Concord, Nov. 12.—H. B. W. Snelling won the club golf championship of the Concord Country Club, defeating Herbert B. Hosmer, 10 and 8, in the turkey tournament for a $10 turkey, the play being 18-holes handicap medal. Charles F. Bowers was the winner, with a 91-20-71. The next best score was made by I. Pierce Sewell, with a 93-14-79.

GOLF

George Murphy, the Wellesley veteran, in quite a case when it came to hitting his shots to large galleries of eager spectators. He was paired with Mike Brady at Metacomet, and by his own effort scored a 78 in the A. M. Brady and Murphy were a good all Francis Quimet and George Bowden and this combination drew the crowd.

* * *

Of course, Murphy had to stand for a little talk from the three stars, so he only smiled when he put his tee shot into the pond at the seventeenth in the afternoon and Quimet asked him if the ball was a floater.

* * *

Here is consolation for the duffer. On the sixteenth hole, less than 100 yards, in the afternoon, the Brady-Murphy, Quimet-Bowden four did not produce a single four. Both Quimet and Bowden were all in trap with their seconds and need five while Murphy also requires a full deal.

* * *

Five Providence women golfers accepted the invitation to play at Wellesley Friday in the mixed foursomes. They were Miss Elizabeth Gordon, Miss Gertrude Hunt, Miss Harry Bosworth, Mrs. James Arthur and Mrs. W. M. P. McDonald. Too bad ought to bring out a full delegation of Boston women players.

* * *

J. R. Bowker got threes twice when they were of great assistance to the best ball score of the Bowker-Guilford combination. Guilford had a great day on the greens, sinking a number of long ones.

MINOR LEAGUES IN NEW FIGHT ON MAJORS

Springfield, Nov. 12.—The annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues resumed its sessions at the Cooley Hotel here today and immediately began to clear the decks for the big battle over the draft and optional agreement rules.

The roll call showed that 33 minor league baseball representatives on hand. Secretary Farrell announced that he had applications for membership from a large number of new leagues.

Before taking up the draft question the convention disposed of a number of smaller matters. [illegible] Tearney, president of the Western League, is the leader of the minors in their fight against the majors regarding the draft and optional agreement rules, and is here this year to see that his pet measures are not buried out of sight.

"I'm here to see that the minors are safe from inroads of the majors," declared Tearney. "And, by the way, I'm going to win out in my fight again this year the same as I did last.

"The minors must stand alone, absolutely devoid of any support from the majors. I worked for six years before I gained the point I was after, and do not intend to let this year go by without more and better work being done on the subject."

In a general way the East is lined up in favor and the West opposed to the draft, but the East is not unanimous in favor of the present [illegible] And in addition to the [illegible] of the situation a [illegible] that may be compelled to [illegible] instead of fast. CLARK, AMHERST TACKLE, OUT OF WILLIAMS GAME

Amherst, Nov. 12.—Clark, who suffered a sprained ankle in the Wesleyan game, will be out of the lineup against Williams Saturday and the two positions will be filled by Demarest and Cummings. Vail, who is recovering from an injury, will be held in reserve.

DARTMOUTH TEAM WITHOUT PUNTER

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 12.—Holbrook and Youngstrom will not be in condition to start against Brown. This leaves the team without a punter as the first string lineup Reckberg has punted a little during the season but his kicking is not dependable. It must also be borne in mind that the players have been working toward that game during the whole season. Yes, sir, I am expecting a close but victorious game for the Brunonians."

What Has Happened So Far

Clive Hurbert, brother of a duke, both debonair scorner of the nobility and titles, without duties or responsibilities to at Dover, his way to Calais, when he is irresistibly attracted by a pretty girl in the dining room of the Lord Warden Hotel. He quickly introduces himself to her and she half reluctantly accepts the introduction. They fall desperately in love with each other and he asks her to marry him. She tells him that she is the Duchess of Harwich's granddaughter, and that, with her consent, they have been chosen for each other by the Duke and Duchess of Harwich, who have brought her over from America for that purpose. Lady Emily, however, is not at all pleased with the match, as she has designs on the Duke herself. Clive, however, is a guest at the Harwich home, Cheshire House, in Lady Emily's absence, and the story begins.

SHE was bending with a little wistful smile over some red knitting, which looked as though it might eventually be a child's petticoat. Clive expected to see a bookmark in some book that would give comfort to a woman who was blessed with a prodigal son—bless it because prodigals naturally lie warmest in a mother's heart.

He went on tiptoes across the room and put his arms around the soft shoulders.

"It's Clive"—she cried. "It's Clive—come back."

"Yes, mother."

She got up and turned round and looked up into his face. "Some thing came to you and told me that it wasn't right to go away and leave us."

"Yes, mother—something came to me."

"Thank God!" she said, and put her arms round his neck and her little soft head down on her. Very precious tears chased each other down her face. And as Clive held this grand, warm-hearted woman not yet out of mourning for a husband who had been dead for fifteen years, whose peculiar, absurd, and no divergence from the long, narrow path of virtue and righteousness and to whom love was only permissible when it had received the blessing of the Church, he asked himself whether he was going to be strong enough to give her reason to count on his return.

Heart to Heart Talk

Five minutes after his mother had gone to bed that night Clive felt a tap on his arm. His mind was in London in Harwich House, and in imagination he had the little head of the girl who had altered

Eat Buckwheats—Yes, You Can

Hot biscuits, pancakes, rich cake and many other tempting foods are declared to be wholesome, digestible and nourishing under normal, healthful conditions.

Many people, however, once get the notion they couldn't eat such things and have grown to fear the consequence. They have decided it solves almost everything to eat bread and water.

But you will find here and there one of this kind eating pickles, cucumbers, onions and other members of the dyspeptic household who has found that, by taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet as assistance there is no bar to after-effects from such indulgence. There is wisdom in such cases, no matter how wealthy you may be, if you don't taste and digest either.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for both those who suffer after eating and for those who practice the fear of suffering. They relieve the distress of indigestion and they also serve to assist the stomach to prevent indigestion.

Eating should be one of our chief pleasures. It is one of the most attractive of social gatherings and it is worth our while to revive this. We may indulge freely by exercising the precautionary measure of aiding the digestive process. Thus you may eat hot biscuits, buckwheats, cake, onions, mince pie, sausages and so on provided you take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet afterwards.

This is an appetizer that was very much in demand a few years ago. Cut in small dices some anchovy in oil, celery, red beets and hard boiled egg. Arrange the whole in a white lettuce leaf and pour over a little coating of mayonnaise sauce.

Arrange over some chopped hard boiled egg, the white and yolk separately, and some chopped parsley. A little lobster coral chopped fine will improve the looks of the whole leaf. Serve very cold.

Mrs. Solomon Says---

(Being the Confessions of the Seven-Hundredth Wife)

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

MEN should not gain a man's EAR?

Not merely, as surely as the lamb after Mary, as surely as after the oysters, and the fish after the soup, so surely will his heart follow after it.

Turn hearken unto my wisdom, and refuse not my counsel, for I have known much men, and not ONE of their little quaintnesses is hidden from me.

Behold, if thou but learnest to ring the changes upon the adverb, "HOW," not one man shall escape thee! For this little word is the magic key which unlocketh the way to every man's vanity.

Hear, then, the fifty-seven varieties of the wise maiden's prayer, which she chanteth unto the man of her heart's desire:

"How wonderful!"

How didst thou ever THINK of that!"

How well we kept step together!"

How distinguished thou lookest in evening clothes!"

How MUCH thy profile resembleth Napoleon's (or Bushman's, or thereabouts)!"

How much it thou never hast thought of becoming an actor? (Denoting timidity.) Or an author? (Denoting genius.) Or a lawyer? (Denoting satisfactoriness.)

Now, then, shall, me not why the reiteration of this word of three letters is as the Song of the Lorelei unto masculine ears, luring them to the whirlpool of Love and unto the rocks of Matrimony.

I only know that it is SO. Therefore, go thou and practice it upon thy Beloved; and thou shalt return unto me and pour blessings upon mine head, crying:

"Oh, mother, it has WORKED!"

Behold, he that I thought made of adamant and of stone hath become as putty in mine hands, and a down pillow beneath my feet!"

Nay, ask me not, neither, how I came to know this thing or lo, my Daughter, I am a woman—and I have TRIED it!

Lady Emily Whistles

"My sainted grandmother!" she said. "That girl!"

"Why do you say that girl like that?"

Lady Emily got up and walked about with her hands clasped behind her back. "Perhaps it was a good thing that I didn't get married by a pretty strong [illegible]. Now don't glare at me. I'm not afraid of you, you know. And I always say I'm likely what I mean to be after consultation. You know that. If you don't want me to go on, say so, and I'll shut up and lie low. If you do, square your shoulders and give me my hand."

Clive got on [illegible] said Clive.

"Right [illegible]. What sort of an [illegible] is she? Not a bad sort, I'm willing to have a look at her, if she's a person who can be trusted [illegible] to be a man, almost old enough to be her father. Your life has been [illegible] almost ever [illegible]."

[illegible] to keep [illegible] to myself [illegible] to anybody else. I'm not [illegible] although I am talking about [illegible] sex. And what is a girl who gives her body in exchange for a title, except one of whom it is difficult to find anything good to say?"

"[illegible] need into it" said Clive [illegible].

Lady E[illegible] engaged or should [illegible] good to [illegible] a lot of [illegible] to the last moment [illegible] it. But I [illegible] the girl belonging to this [illegible] who can be forced into doing [illegible] however small and unpleasant, especially by her parents, [illegible] had your hand on [illegible] wonder of the world [illegible] wish you'd caught that boat [illegible]."

THE [illegible] of the [illegible] by David Belaine in [illegible] a rough draft of a letter he proposed to send to Desiree Leighton upon his arrival in the [illegible].

He had made his plans definitely. He would go to a hotel, register there as David Smith, send his note to Desiree and quietly await her answer.

He had never found another epistle as difficult to indite as was this short one to the woman he loved.

He was a victim of conflicting emotions. At one moment he hoped that with her charitable nature, she would consent to see her father's ex-chauffeur. But by the time that he had laid this flattering unction to his soul he was assailed by doubts. Perhaps she would consider David Smith inexcusably impertinent in seeking her out—he, an ordinary chauffeur who was no longer in her father's employ—he who had left in direct opposition to his employer's wishes.

If she were to consent to see him now, he knew that he could not bring himself to tell her the truth about himself. At [illegible] he could not [illegible] her presence [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] had summoned.

He might have been as happy returning to New York a rich man after having worked here as a poor man. But happiness could not be his until he had had the interview which he dreaded, yet longed for.

In his hotel room he threw off his hat and coat and glanced over the last tentative letter he had written on the train. Then, with an impatient ejaculation, he tore it into bits and tossed these into a waste basket.

Seizing a pen, he wrote rapidly [illegible] note.

"My dear Miss Leighton: I am [illegible] the liberty of asking you to [illegible] me a few minutes. I have just returned to New York for a [illegible] time and desire to speak to you about a little matter that is of [illegible] importance to me. Kindly set your [illegible] for seeing me. I will [illegible] [illegible] yours.

"Respectfully yours,

"DAVID SMITH."

He did not re-read the note. He was afraid that if he did so he might not have the courage to [illegible].

"Take this to Miss Leighton," he directed, "and bring the reply as soon as possible."

When the [illegible] had gone he walked up and down the room a half dozen times. He felt [illegible] dizzy and remembered that he had eaten nothing since his [illegible] fast.

"To-night I am in a [illegible] state of nerves," he muttered. "I must [illegible] myself together. I must [illegible] out of this [illegible]. And no wonder! All his future happiness depends upon the outcome of it!"

Which soliloquy shows how much in love David Smith Belaine was.

Nevertheless he ordered some supper brought up to his room. He was averse to going into the public dining room. He might meet one of the Leightons' acquaintances there, or some one who would recognize in him the ex-chauffeur.

THE WICKED MARQUIS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

NEW NOVEL FROM THE PEN OF THE FAMOUS AUTHOR

Love and Revenge Centre About an Agreeable English Aristocrat of the Old School and His Ancestral Estate

CHAPTER XX.

BARLOW'S car came to a standstill in the avenue, and Marcia looked across the strip of green turf towards the cottage with a queer little thrill of remembrance.

"You are sure you won't mind waiting?" she asked, as she sprang down. "If there is any fatted calf about, I'll call you in."

"I shall be perfectly content here," he said, "however long you may be. I shall back the car on to the turf and read."

She nodded, turned away, lifted the latch of the gate and made her way towards the cottage—curiously silent, and with no visible sign of habitation except for the smoke curling up from the chimney. As she drew nearer to the rustic entrance, she hesitated. A rush of those very sensations at which she had so often gently mocked swept through her consciousness, unsteadying and bewildering her. Mandeleys, imposing in its grim stillness, seemed to be throwing out shadows towards her, catching her up in a whirlpool of memories, half sentimental, half tragical. It was in the little cottage garden where she now stood, and in the woods beyond, that she had wandered with that strange new feeling in her heart of which she was, even at that moment, lutenesly conscious, gazing through the mists of her inexperience towards the new world and new heaven which her love was unfolding before her. A hundred forgotten fancies flashed into her brain. She remembered, with a singular and most unnerving accuracy, the silent vigils which she had spent, half hidden amongst those tall hollyhocks. She had seen the gray twilight of morning pass, seen the moon roll away and, turret by turret, the great house stand out like some fairy palace fashioned from space in a single night. She had seen the thrushes hop from the shrubberies and coverts on to the dew-sparkled lawn, had heard their song, growing always in volume, had seen the faint sunlight flash in the windows, before she had crept back to her room.

Another day in that strange turmoil which had followed the coming of her love! She had watched shooting parties assemble in the drive outside, her father in command, she herself hidden yet watchful, her eyes always upon one figure, her thoughts with him. And then the nights—the Summer nights when men and women in evening costume strolled down from the house. She could see their white shirt fronts glistening in the twilight. Again she heard the firm yet loitering step and the quiet still voice which had changed the world for her.

"In Vont about, Miss Marcia?" she would hear him say. "I want to have a talk with him about the partridge drives tomorrow." She closed her eyes. The smell of the honeysuckle and the early cottage roses seemed suddenly almost stupefying. There were a few seconds—perhaps even a minute—before Vont had donned his brown velveteen coat and issued from the cottage—just time for a whispered word, a glance, a touch of the fingers. Marcia felt her knees shake as she lingered underneath the porch. She was swept with recalcitrant memories, stinging like the lash of a whip. Perhaps this new wisdom of hers was, after all, a delusion, the old standards of her Calvinistic childhood unassailable.

Then, for the first time, she was conscious of a familiar figure. Richard Vent was seated in a hard kitchen chair at the end of the garden, with a book upon his knee and his face turned to Mandeleys. As the sound of her little exclamation he turned his head. At first it was clear that he did not recognize his visitor. He laid down the book and rose to his feet. Marcia came a few steps towards him and then paused. Several very ingenious openings escaped her altogether.

Father Not Glad

"Father," she began, a little hesitatingly, "you see, I've come to see you. Are you glad?"

He stood looking at her—a man of rather more than middle height but bowed, with silvery hair and a little patch of white whiskers. The rest of his face was clean-shaven, still hard and brown as in his youth, and his eyes were like steel.

"No," he answered, "I am not glad. Since you are here, though, take this chair. I will fetch another while I hear what you have to say."

"Shall we go inside?" she suggested.

He shook his head.

"Your mother lived and died there," he reminded her.

Marcia set her teeth.

"I suppose she walked in the garden sometimes," she said resentfully.

"The garden is different," he declared. "The earth changes from generation to generation, just as the flowers here throw out fresh blossoms and the weeds come and go. But my roof-tree stands where it always did. Wait."

He disappeared into the house and returned in a few moments with a chair which he placed a few feet away from Marcia. Then he sat and looked at her steadily.

"So you are Marcia," he said. "You've grown well-looking."

"Marcia — your daughter," she reminded him gently. "Are you going to forget that altogether?"

But a wonderful new soap product —in GRANULES

Cake Soap—the rubbing wears the life out of your clothes

"Washing Powder"—good enough for scrubbing but ruinous for clothes

WITH cake soap you rub till you wear the life out of your garments. If you add washing powders full of harsh chemicals, they "eat" the clothes and ruin your hands.

But you have to get the clothes white.

Soak them in a tubful of soapy, bubbly Rinso suds. Rinso is not a cake soap! Not a "washing powder"! But a wonderful new form of soap—in fine granules.

Soak them overnight or for three hours in the morning.

Then rinse them! And hang them out! Snowy white without boiling or any real rubbing. The pure Rinso suds have done all the work.

Don't wash the old way another week. One package of Rinso will show you how to save hours of exhausting work, how to save yourself and save your clothes. Get Rinso from your grocer and follow the easy directions on the package. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass. (Makers of Lux.)

U. S. GOVERNMENT WILL NOT EMBARGO SILVER

According to Director Baker of the United States Mint at Washington the government has no intention of putting an embargo upon silver exports. The government policy will be to let the price of white metal take its course. On Monday it was at record high prices both in London and New York.

It was quoted, in fact, above gold coin parity of about $1.29½. Quotations were from $1.30 to $1.31½ an ounce for San Francisco delivery. No business at such prices was reported, however.

GEN'L MOTORS SLUMPS 25 POINTS

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, but well about the lowest morning level. Steels had improved, U. S. Steel showing a fractional gain, Republic being up more than one, and Crucible just two points. Sugars were strong, American Sugar having advanced two, and Cuban American almost, twenty-five points. General Motors showed the largest loss during the forenoon. The market was very active, first hour transactions totalling nearly half a million shares.

Call money opened at 14 per cent. Foreign exchange was weak, sterling demand made a new low at 4.10¾, off 1¾. Low records were also registered in francs and lire. Paris check rate was 9.25, off 7 centimes, and lire checks 12.82, off 17 centimes.

At the opening prices declined, but the recessions were moderate, considering the list as a whole. The market continued weak during the first hour, but, with some losses recorded further, a few rallied to some extent. At the end of an hour price losses ranged from fractions to several points. General Motors was the weakest stock. Around 11 o'clock it was off twenty-five points. This represented a slump of five points since Monday's closing. Tobacco products weakened decisively. American Tobacco falling nine points, Lorillard seven. Tobacco Products four. Steels showed steadiness under pressure, but were among receding issues, particularly Mexican Petroleum. Worthington Pump was among the weakest specialties.

The money situation engrossed attention to the exclusion of labor and all other matters. The advance of the call rate yesterday to 25 per cent. was accepted as indication that deflation had not only begun, but would surely run its course. Liquidation of stocks was resumed as soon as the exchange opened. In regard to rumors that the Federal Reserve discount rates would be advanced again, Governor Strong said:

In reply to inquiries respecting rumors that the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank would increase the rate of discount at their meeting on Wednesday, it was stated by Mr. Strong that there was no basis for any such rumor.

There was tension in the money market before Messrs. Harding and Strauss of the Federal Reserve Board visited Wall Street to confer with bankers. The relief which ensued was followed by the soaring of the call rate, great stock market activity and the likely to raise its rate to 7 per cent.

A New York newspaper is informed from London that the Bank of England is likely to raise its rate to 7 per cent.

Price of Exchange Seats

The lowest price paid this year for membership in the New York Stock Exchange was $1,000 in January, while the highest was $110,000 paid last week. The latter figure is the high record price. Five years ago a seat sold as low as $34,000.

Cotton Market Opening

Liverpool, Nov. 12.—A severe break at Liverpool, exploited chiefly by unsettled financial conditions, caused sympathetic weakness at the cotton market opening here today, first prices being 58 to 71 points lower. Trade buying rallied prices about 30 points from opening levels. At the end of twenty minutes the market was unsettled at about 50 points under yesterday's close. Opening prices were: December, 21.90 to 37.80, off 28 to 31; January, 20.70 to 36.60, off 45 to 58; March, 35.60 to 35.40, off 51 to 71; May, 34.80, off 56; July, 34.10 to 34.00, off 59 to 61.

Fatimas contain more Turkish tobacco than any other Turkish blend cigarette—but not too much. It's that famous "just-enough-Turkish" blend.

Issues to recede from fractions to a point or more included Old Dominion, Osceola, Stewart, Ventura, National Leather, Swift & Co, Hingham, Root & Van Dervoort, Gray & Davis, Elder, Simms Magneto, Libby, Swift & Co, Mohawk, Waldham Watch and Island Creek.

Among issues to show small gains were East Butte, U. S. Smelting and Walworth. American Telephone lost its early gain.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN NOVEMBER 12, 1919 BOSTON

Moral Issues Supported by the Hearst Papers Triumph in Three Great Cities

Summarizing what it called the supreme issues in the New York elections Nov. 4, the New York World said:

"Hearst made himself an issue when he undertook to drive Justice Robert L. Luce from the bench because Governor Smith had refused to buy the Hearst support by naming a Hearst henchman for Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Clarence J. Shearn.

"Nobody can vote a straight Republican ticket without voting for Hearst and for all that Hearst means in the public life of the community. That is the misfortune of Mr. McCook, whose personal fitness for the bench cannot be questioned, but who is the victim of political circumstances which would make his election and Justice Luce's defeat a Hearst victory."

This is a characteristic World lie. The World knows that Mr. Hearst neither asked nor suggested the nomination of any candidate for the Supreme Court except Justice Newburger, with whom Mr. Hearst had no personal acquaintance.

Mr. Hearst publicly stated in August that he would support Judge Newburger "on any ticket of any party that nominated him," solely on his record as judge.

But Governor Smith chose to make Luce's success the test of his own vindication by the people against the charge that the Governor has sacrificed the best interests of the people by promoting faithful servants of the New York Central Railroad and of the Milk Trust.

The result:

Judge Newburger (Rep.).....228,043
Judge Luce (Dem.).....169,829

The normal Republican vote in this judicial district was 104,044 cast for Judge Ordway last year. The gain of 124,000 for Newburger and the defeat of Luce was the answer of the people on the issue raised by Governor Smith, supported by the World.

The vote for Justice Newburger was so large that he carried the other Republican candidate for Judge, McCook, with him, defeating Untermyer (Dem.) by 45,492.

The World supported Luce, of course, because Luce was the New York Central nominee and the little Pulitzers own blocks of stock in the New York Central.

Nevertheless, Luce, whom Governor Smith, Tammany and the World earnestly supported, was beaten by 58,214.

In Chicago the Hearst papers fought alone and single-handed, against the combined power of plutocracy and all the other papers for the adoption of three amendments to the new State Constitution. They embodied the Initiative and Referendum and the principle of public ownership.

The Chicago Tribune, in summarizing the issues of the campaign the day before the election, made the defeat of these amendments its principal appeal, in these words:

"Voters are urged to defeat the Initiative and Referendum and 'gateway' amendments, which are complicated devices proposed by the Hearst newspapers and which tend inevitably to obstruct the normal processes of the convention."

We take from the columns of the Tribune itself the day after election the results of the popular vote in Cook County (the city of Chicago):

VOTE ON PUBLIC POLICY QUESTIONS.
(Cook County Districts.)

	For.	Ag'st.	Maj'ty.
Initiative and Referendum	148,546	76,176	72,370
Gateway Amendment	141,865	74,108	67,757
Public Ownership	156,302	71,069	85,233

Former President William Howard Taft, writing from Boston to the Philadelphia Public Ledger on the issues in the Massachusetts election, said:

"Mr. Hearst's paper, the Boston American, has refused to support Mr. Long on the issue raised by the Boston police strike. If Governor Coolidge is elected it will have a most salutary effect in every corner of the United States, and its significance will not be lost in Europe. Governor Coolidge's example of moral courage will be of inestimable value to all the Governors and Mayors of this country."

The result was that Governor Coolidge, elected a year ago by only 17,000, is re-elected by 124,000, the largest plurality ever given a Governor of Massachusetts.

Radical policies succeed when they have in them a moral element, because they are then sound policies.

When radical policies are not moral they are unsound and fail because the moral sentiment of the people is then arrayed against them and on the conservative side.

In thus summarizing the results of the election in three great American cities on Tuesday the point we wish to emphasize is not that the Hearst newspapers won. It is that in every city a moral and not a partisan issue was presented to the people.

The Hearst papers fought with earnest sincerity on the moral side.

In all three cities the moral issue was triumphantly successful.

House Shortage and Spread of Tenancy Significant

In a recent speech before the Real Estate Association of New York State, Senator Calder drew together a number of facts about the housing situation, locally and nationally, which deserve attention.

He pointed out that the money spent for dwelling houses in the three boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn fell from $76,000,000 in 1916 to $10,000,000 in 1918, notwithstanding the increased pressure of population; while he estimated that throughout the United States there is today a shortage of at least 1,000,000 homes.

Moreover, the estimated yearly flow of $3,500,000,000 into building improvements throughout the United States had, by the end of 1918, fallen to less than 10 per cent.

But Senator Calder drew attention by certain other figures to a situation which has a wider and a more ominous significance:

The United States has been at war on an average of once in twenty years since the Constitution was adopted, and the object of each of these wars has been, in the last analysis, to preserve the home. Yet we find that to the majority of people in this country "home" means little more than a dwelling for which they are paying rent. This situation is bad enough, but what is worse in the situation is that the percentage of these rent payers is growing with each enumeration.

IN 1850 WE WERE ADVISED THAT 52 PER CENT. OF THE PEOPLE IN AMERICA LIVED UNDER THE RENTAL SYSTEM; THAT IN 1910 THE PERCENTAGE HAD INCREASED TO 55; AND THAT PROBABLY THE CENSUS OF 1920 WILL SHOW THAT FULLY 60 PER CENT. OF THE PEOPLE WILL BE CLASSED AS TENANTS. If it is the case today that but forty people out of a hundred live in their own homes, and that the increase, small as it is, will continue, it is fair to conclude that twenty-five years hence less than one-third of the population of the United States will be outside of the tenant class.

A common interest in the nation's wealth and the widest distribution of real property are absolutely essential to our national wellbeing, and these essentials are not to be looked for among a population three-quarters of whom are at the mercy of landlords. Tenantry is a poor substitute for the real home, as it leads neither toward independence and responsibility nor toward community association, which is as necessary for the poise and development of the adult as it is for that of the child.

The tenant, no matter how long he remains on the land or in a community, is losing the "unearned increment." He is living in surroundings marred and depreciated by others. By changing from one community to another he deprives himself and his family of permanent acquaintances and friendships. This brings about an unsettled and discontented state of mind, induces unproductiveness, leads to waning power and lower wages, and a gradual descent in the social scale, all of which would be avoided if the family lived in its own home, "be it ever so humble."

In an endeavor to meet the immediate housing shortage and to modify, if possible, the growing tendency toward tenancy, the Senator has proposed two measures of Federal legislation:

(1) Exempting from the income tax investments in mortgage loans to the extent of $40,000; and

(2) Permitting building and loan associations to use as property the $2,000,000,000 now tied up in first-class real estate mortgages, thus releasing for new home building funds now sequestrated.

In comparison with the magnitude of the problem, these, it must be recognized, are small steps toward a solution.

The Senator has chosen to make them small because he is of that conservative cast of mind which hesitates to adventure, and because he is sincere in his belief that the best care for such business problems is to let the common sense of the people work them out with a minimum of official interference.

We view differently some of these exigencies. We look upon them as justifying broad use of the public power in the public interest, even to the entrance of government into housing operations when private enterprise does not suffice.

The present shortage in houses is a result of the action of public power and the power which created it should be used to correct it as far as possible.

But Senator Calder, if somewhat hesitant in suggestions of remedy, is at least to be commended for stating the problem clearly.

DEAR K. C. B.: There is a great weight on my shoulders and maybe you can help me out. I was riding on a train recently from Oakland to Sacramento, and right alongside of me there was sitting a Japanese gentleman and he was reading one of your columns and he would read a little and then he would look at me and laugh (you know how they laugh), and then he would look at me again and then he would dig in his coat pocket and produce a little directory, and then he would laugh and look at your column, and then he would look up in his directory why he had laughed, and then he would look at your column and laugh in my face, and he repeated that so often that it got on my nerves, and I couldn't change my seat, and I asked him what he was laughing at when he looked at me and all he said was: "Yes."

Now, won't you please answer and say if in your judgment he was laughing at your column or at me, or was it because he could not get a kick out of his directory.

EDWARD LEVY.
Berkeley, Calif.

MY DEAR Ed.
IN THE first place.
IT WASN'T a directory.
HE WAS looking at.
IT WAS a dictionary.
AND I mention this.
BECAUSE IF I didn't.
I WOULD get so many letters.
BEARING THE suggestion.
THAT IT was a dictionary.
AND NOT a directory.
AND ABOUT your question.

WHAT WAS he laughing at?
I DON'T know.
AND I wouldn't suggest.
IT WAS my column.
UNLESS I knew.
WHAT IT was about.
BECAUSE ONE time.
I WAS introduced.
TO A fat gentleman.
WITH A very red face.
AND SOME one had told him.

I WAS a humorist.
AND THE next morning.
I MET him again.
AND HE had a paper.
WITH MY column in it.
AND HE'D read it.
AND WAS laughing heartily.
AND HE began to read.
AND WHAT he read.
WASN'T FUNNY at all.
IT WAS something I'd written.

THAT I thought was sad.
AND POETRY.
AND MY wife had said.
THAT IT was beautiful.
AND THIS fat guy.
READ IT all.
AND LAUGHED.
AND GOT red in the face.
AND MAYBE somebody.
HAD TOLD your Japanese gentleman.
THAT I was a humorist.
I THANK you.

Commanding the Tide
Sleeping Forever
Dividing Land

By Arthur Brisbane

These days are busy, perplexing, and for those whose fortune is accumulated, rather worrying.

But on the whole the country seems to be going in a sensible, straight line.

The Senate has told Europe that the people here intend to manage the affairs of the United States. All the affection and respect that the people have for Woodrow Wilson cannot persuade them to substitute his judgment for the judgment of the nation expressed through Congress.

There will be no "Article 10" handing over to Europe the right to decide what this country must do, what its duties and its shortcomings are. The United States will govern the United States, an important decision.

The Attorney-General, representing power to enforce law, said much in these words:

"Those who conceive that the resolutions of a convention or the orders of the officers of any organization in the country, whether labor organizations or any other, are superior in authority to law of the land, will find themselves mistaken."

This country has gone through a good deal to establish the right of the majority to make laws for all. The people intend, and the Attorney-General expresses it, that no group, Socialist, capitalist, labor, religious, agricultural or any other shall say: "The law does not affect our concern."

Doubtless after it shall have been established that not even a million workmen can make laws of their own, the government will also establish the fact that not even a handful of corporation owners can continue making laws of their own.

There exists a rising tide of discontent, dissatisfaction with the condition vaguely called "unrest."

When the tide is rising only one power can say: "Hither shalt thou come, and no farther; and here shalt thy proud waves be stayed."

The old king at the ocean's edge demonstrated to his courtiers that a king can't stop the rising waves, and history will demonstrate that not even a learned federal judge can permanently rule a great number.

The injunction, like the fire engine, should be used only for a short time and in emergencies. The President and the Attorney-General will not give to millions of dissatisfied workmen the impression that they can be held back by an arbitrary order, however just, while all the courts and the slow process through those courts are open to the managers of capital.

Most important is enforcement of law. Next comes absolute evenness and justice in enforcement. Not one method for a few, another method for the crowd.

Physicians of Willard-Parker Hospital and newspapers are excited because Mrs. Dora Mintz has been lying in deep sleep for thirty days. That interests human beings intensely.

They are only vaguely interested in the fact that one hundred years from now all the fifteen hundred million people on earth will be sound asleep, and so far as they know, apart from the blessed promises of faith, to sleep forever. When a chicken dies a natural death in a poultry yard there are curious demonstrations by the chickens. They get much excited.

Providence kindly arranges that none of them worry about the fact that all their heads will soon be cut off.

In New York, world's richest city, taxes and rents climb. There is agitation based on the discovery that two thousand million dollars' worth of property goes free of all taxation. Some of it belongs to the nation, some to the city, some to Free Masons, some to various religious denominations.

Religious property tax free, as it should be, amounts to two or three hundred million dollars.

Critics declare that the founder of Christianity, who said "The son of man hath not where to lay his head," must be surprised to know that if he came back he would find hundreds of millions' worth of real estate awaiting him in one city.

Brisson, extreme Socialist, running for re-election to the French Chamber, says, "Peasants, the land is yours. You may take it. No more chateaux. No more landlords."

There are now six million individuals in France that own land, many of the millions peasants. If any attempt is made to take Monsieur Brisson's advice there will be resistance.

The land was divided up during the French revolution, when money sank so low that you couldn't buy a pair of boots for a thousand francs. But the inferior money enabled peasants to buy the land that had belonged to the nobles.

It is safe to assume that the six million French land owners will hold their land through the present after-the-war crisis and that France will not see any repetition of Russia's explosion.

While imagining "what will happen," it is well to remember that Russia, before the recent change, was about where France was in 1790.

THE OLD FAMILY FRIEND

Do you remember what an event it was, in your family, when a letter came from the family friend?

Every one of the children and father or mother was privileged to open the letter. All depended upon who got it first.

No matter to which one addressed, each member of the family felt sure of a personal remembrance or word before the letter concluded.

Through sunshine and shadow, fortune and misfortune, you were sure, always, of sympathy from the family friend.

Other friends and acquaintances came and went, but faithful under all circumstances—the family friend.

Sister or brother, father or mother, even, might misunderstand, but never the family friend.

Do you realize what it means to keep family friends?

And when it comes to the third and fourth generation of family friends there is a quality of understanding and friendship which is above anything money or influence can buy—it is like heaven on earth—to see the family friend.

Are you a family friend to someone?
